Martial Law Proclaimed in Dam Strike; 7 Wounded

Colorado Governor Acts After Second Shooting Affray of Pickets, Deputies

By the Associated Press

Green Mountain Dam, Colo., Aug. 2.—Gov. Ralph L. Carr proclaimed martial law tonight in the Green Mountain Dam project strike zone immediately after a second shooting clash between union sympathizers and strike foes in which three were reported wounded.

Four men were wounded, one seriously, in gunfire today at the project, seized by opponents of the strike who broke through picket lines last night.

A bridge on State Highway 9 was dynamited about 2 miles south of the dam, $4,000,000 unit in the $44,000,000 Colorado-Big Thompson Federal reclamation bureau development in northwestern Colorado. The highway was barricaded by a picket line 2 miles north of the dam.

Bullet Lodges in Skull

Thomas Kellerhalls, about 35, of Denver, a union sympathizer, was shot through the left eye. The bullet lodged in his skull. Union pickets drove Kellerhalls to a hospital at Fairplay with Art Morrow, about 40, who was shot through the arm and grazed on the chest by another bullet. It was said Kellerhalls might not recover.

The Summit County sheriff's office reported another wounded man was brought to Breckenridge. A fourth was grazed on the right hip.

A barrage of more than 100 shots and the bridge dynamiting were reported to Gov. Carr at Glenwood Springs with a request he assign National Guard troops to restore order in the dispute of American Federation of Labor crafts with the Warner Construction Co., project contractor. Carr instructed Attorney General Byron G. Rogers in Denver to draft a martial law proclamation but declared he would not call out troops before a full investigation.

Ranchers Deputized

The dam and diversional tunnel project is on the Blue River, about 18 miles southeast of Kremmling, approximately 70 miles south of the Wyoming border, just west of the continental divide.

Non-union workers, ranchers and townspeople who pushed through the A. F. L. picket lines were deputized and armed at the order of Sheriff John H. Lee of Summit County as soon as they invaded the project last night.

Union pickets reported the project deputies blasted the bridge attempting to prevent truck loads of strike sympathizers from Denver from reaching the scene.

Approximately 250 men armed with shotguns, rifles and pistols were mustered in Kremmling for an assault on the new union picket line. Mayor Walter Wood of Granby reported the "back to work" leaders held back the armed men while they besought Gov. Carr to call out the National Guard.

Encircling Planned

About 50 of the group, however, moved out of Kremmling after dark. The group's plan, its leaders said, was to encircle the picket line across highway 9 and reach the project.

Al Marlow, truck foreman for the Warner Company, reported late tonight the camp was then quiet.

Several hundred pickets and sympathizers could be seen at stations from 300 to 400 yards outside the project boundaries, Marlow said.

The strike was called July 12 by five American Federation of Labor building trades crafts demanding union-recognition contracts.

Police Believe Trio In $9,900 Holdup Blacked Faces

Baltimore, Aug. 2 (AP).—The possibility that three gunmen who took the $9,900 pay roll from Sinai Hospital messengers had blackened faces and were not colored was investigated today by police.

Capt. William J. Forrest questioned Miss Rhea Nusbaum, head bookkeeper of the hospital, and Charles Zavodny, her chauffeur, with whom she was returning from a mid-town bank when they were held up at noon yesterday.

Both declared they believed the gunmen were colored and were not disguised white men.

State police continued to maintain a vigil on highways seeking the trio which escaped in a gray sedan.

Five-year-old "Patsy" Perna last night was restored, by a writ of habeas corpus, to the arms of the foster mother from whom she was taken two weeks ago on complaint of the Board of Public Welfare.

Justice Goldsborough, who took over the case from the Juvenile Court yesterday, ordered the child restored immediately to Mrs. Catherine Bayasco Perna, whose apartment at 1341 Connecticut avenue was thought unsuitable by the board.

Mrs. Perna hurried from the courtroom to the corridor where officials had kept the girl all day.

"Darling, mother's so happy!" she sobbed, and took the child in her arms.

SEC to Probe German Bond Issue in U. S.

Treasury Weighs Antidumping Tariff On Nazi Wood Pulp

By the Associated Press.

The Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday announced an inquiry to determine whether a German bond issue in this country should be halted, while the Treasury investigated the possibility of imposing antidumping tariff duties on wood pulp from the Reich and other countries.

The SEC said that details of an intended $73,000,000 bond issue by the Berlin government had been shrouded in secrecy. It was alleged that inadequate information was filed with the commission on the state of the German budget, the German public debt, gold and foreign exchange position and other matters.

The SEC's action followed an announcement last Saturday by the Commerce Department that recent dispatches indicated an "increasing strain on the economic resources of Germany."

Only $35,000,000 of the securities were to have been issued at this time, an SEC official said. The balance were to have been issued to meet interest payments due in the

Bride Leaves Mate At Bali; Couldn't Stand Competition

New York, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Mrs. Charles Henry Fonda explained ruefully today that "I couldn't stand the competition of those Balinese women."

She returned alone from a projected honeymoon cruise around the world and said she left her husband, cousin of the movie star, Henry Fonda, on the Isle of Bali.

"I suppose he is still there looking at them," she said. "No husband should ever be taken to Bali on a honeymoon."

Parliament to Recess

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 2.—Prime Minister Chamberlain overrode a minor revolt within his own party tonight, won a 250 to 132 vote of confidence and pushed through his motion to adjourn Parliament for two months beginning Friday.

Liberals and Laborites supported by a group of "anti-appeasement" conservatives, including Winston Churchill, wartime cabinet minister, had attempted to have Commons reassemble August 21 for a one-day session because of the critical international situation.

The opposition members expressed fears Chamberlain might return to his policy of appeasement as soon as Parliament was out of the way. They recalled that they were in recess at the time of the Munich agreement last September.

The prime minister contended, however, that the government was ready for any emergency and that there was no need to have the members of Parliament break their vacations except in case of unexpected developments. In that event, he said, the members would be called back.

He made the opposition amendment a question of confidence and

Mrs. Stinson Wins Annulment On Grounds She Was Drugged

Mrs. Lola M. Stinson, who fought for the annulment of her marriage to Joseph Whitla Stinson through four weeks of sensational testimony in the District Court last March and April, yesterday received her freedom by decision of Justice Oscar R. Luhring.

Mrs. Stinson

Handing down his decision 104 days after the trial ended April 20, Justice Luhring upheld Mrs. Stinson's charge that she had been "drugged into the marriage" and "had not known what she was doing" by declaring her "non compos mentis" at the time of the marriage.

The court also found that the marriage had never been consummated, and "at no time ratified or validated by the plaintiff."

By the court's action Mrs. Stinson became yesterday once again Mrs. William Livingstone Crounse, 54-year-old heiress to a fortune now partly tied up in litigation.

Justice Luhring ruled that her marriage to Stinson, socially prominent artist and former Government official, was invalid and void.

The justice did not pass on the validity of the trust fund of $230,000 which Mrs. Crounse set up for her husband before her marriage, and which is the subject of a sep-

25,000 Hear Opera at Watergate

Metropolitan Cast And Orchestra Get Thunderous Applause In 'Madame Butterfly'

By John Chabot Smith.

A feast of delight for eyes and ears was presented to more than 25,000 at the Watergate last night, when Hilda Burke and a cast of Metropolitan Opera Company singers performed Puccini's operatic tragedy, "Madame Butterfly."

The record-breaking audience crowded every inch of space within earshot of the barge and the many amplifiers, sitting in the aisles and on the grass at the water's edge, stretching almost to the underpasses, filling the extra bleachers at the top of the steps and overflowing on to the grass and the bridges where the stage could not be seen.

Even before the opera began it had become impossible for latecomers to climb over the waiting enthusiasts on the steps and reach their seats, but an aisle was kept open through the jammed crowd from the Memorial Bridge under pass.

Barge Transformed

When the lights went up on the barge a burst of applause greeted its seemingly magical transformation. A dainty Japanese garden had appeared where musicians are usually seen, and below on a flat scow decorated with Japanese lanterns the National Symphony Orchestra played, under the baton of Alexander Smallens.

A murmur of delight passed through the audience as the stage filled with tripping Japanese maidens, coy behind their fluttering fans, after Madame Butterfly's serenely beautiful opening song. Her cool, rich, transparently clear voice carried the story of her passion for Lieut. Pinkerton far out to the thousands who could not see the stage.

Audience Breathless

With no curtain to hide the scene shifters at the end of the first act and no elaborate stage equipment, the garden was changed for the interior of Mme. Butterfly's house during a rather long intermission. In the dramatic scenes that followed, as the unhappy Japanese girl gradually learns her sailor-husband has abandoned her, Hilda Burke put all the dignity of a courageous woman into her singing.

A breathless quiet descended on 25,000 listeners as Mme. Butterfly and Suzuki (Georgia Standing) made ready for the husband's return at the end of the second act, in a hauntingly lovely duet that ended as they took up their vigil by the window.

As the lights went down on the stage, the clear sky above the river, gray in the light of the moon and a few bright stars, seemed a part of the magic scene. There was a moment of quiet at the end of the act before the audience broke into thunderous applause.

Kindler Plans More Opera

U. S. Investigating Louisiana Jury Fixing Reports

New Orleans, Aug. 2 (AP).—O. John Rogge, assistant United States Attorney General investigating Louisiana's political scandals, said tonight the Government was investigating reports of jury tampering in the trial of Abraham L. Shushan, a Huey P. Long lieutenant acquitted four years ago on charges he evaded income taxes totaling $71,153.52.

Hugh Wilkinson, jr., Shushan's attorney, contended at the trial that the money received by Shushan was given him as fiscal agent for the Louisiana Democratic Association and that it was used for political purposes and therefore was not subject to income tax.

Rogge's statement followed an assertion here yesterday by Elmer Irey, chief of the Internal Revenue Department's intelligence unit, that under a six-year statute of limitations the Government could prosecute on income-tax evasions as far back as 1933.

Swanson Leaves $37,600 Estate And D. C. Home

An estate of $37,600, exclusive of his residence in Washington, was left by Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson, who died last month, it was shown by his will probated in the Pittsylvania County (Va.) Circuit Court yesterday, according to the Associated Press.

His will provides $10,000 to his stepson, Douglas Dean Hall, of Washington, and leaves to his widow the home, all furnishings, tangible personal property and all money he had in banks, along with two-thirds of the balance of the estate. The remaining third was left to his brother, H. C. Swanson, and his two sisters, Misses Annie and Sallie Swanson, of Danville, Va.

At the death of the brother and sisters these shares will revert to Mrs. Swanson and if she is not living then they will go to Douglas Hall.

Third Deficiency Bill, Slashed $161,000,000, Passes House; Hatch Measure Becomes Law

Roosevelt Urges Congress to Study Extension of Ban on Politics to States

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the Hatch bill extending the civil service ban against political activity to nearly 300,000 Government officials and employes not under civil service, including numerous holders of so-called "patronage" positions.

At the same time, he sent Congress a message in which he made two major recommendations, as follows:

That Congress study, at the next session, beginning in January, the advisability of extending the prohibition against political activity to the 2,800,000 State and municipal employes, "who participate actively in Federal elections."

That the bill, which automatically became law with his signature, be amended "as soon as possible" to permit Federal officials and employes affected by it to hold office in nearby Maryland and Virginia towns. He pointed out that there is now an exception to the civil service political ban, which the Hatch bill in large measure copies, permitting Government employes to run for local office hereabouts.

How Enforce It?

How the new law will be enforced—an ambiguity which Mr. Roosevelt pointed out last week—still was not clear. He said, however, that he had asked Attorney General Murphy to safeguard the "civil rights of every Government employe" through the new civil liberties unit of the Justice Department.

The bill, the President said, "is in harmony with the policy that I have consistently advocated during all my political life, namely, the wider extension of civil service as opposed to its curtailment."

He undertook in the message, however, to answer a number of questions as to the bill's application which he mentioned last week in criticizing the measure on the ground of its uncertainties. The message, therefore, assumes the nature of an interpretative document to which the Federal courts may refer in passing on possible citations.

Reaction in Congress to the President's approval of the bill was favorable. Democrats and Republicans alike hailed the action as "an effective step toward clean politics."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, the bill's author, said he was "deeply gratified." He expressed a willingness to co-operate with the President in any "reasonable changes."

Controversy arose in the Senate over a statement by the President that the "genesis" of the legislation lay in the message of last January

D. C., Nation See Air Might On 'Birthday'

Corps Gets Laurels, Holds Open House Marking 30th Year

Eighteen Army bombers of General Headquarters Air Force, Langley Field, Va., shot over the National Capital at 10,000 feet yesterday, as ceremonies were held beneath the first military plane, now lodged in the National Museum, commemorating its purchase by the Federal Government 30 years ago.

The squadron made a tour of seven East Coast cities as part of a Nation-wide celebration of the Air Corps birthday. In a 10-minute round-trip flight from Fort Myer to Alexandria, Lieut. D. H. Baker, of Bolling Field, re-enacted the test trip of the 800-pound biplane built for the Army in 1909 by the Wright brothers.

Defenses Tested

An air show at Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, drew 100,000 spectators seeking a first-hand view of the Nation's aerial might, while Air Corps stations throughout the United States held "open house" for all comers.

More in keeping with the threatening role of bombers in world politics, Army and civilian volunteers on the Pacific Coast tested methods of defense against air raids, manning a warning net extending from Canada to Mexico.

President Roosevelt pressed a button at the White House, flashing the starting signal for parades of aerial might at nine military posts. Virtually every serviceable Army plane took to the air, officials said.

Laurels for Pioneers

In the services at the Museum, under auspices of the Early Birds, pioneer fliers' organization, a laurel wreath was presented by Mrs. Alys McKay Bryant, who soloed in 1912, to Col. H. H. C. Richards, who represented Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps. It was in "tribute to the pioneers of the Air Corps and to the officers and personnel of the Air Corps of today." After

House Refuses Funds for Civil Service Classes

Hopes of Employes Based on Promotion Plan Are Blasted

With the Ramspeck civil service extension bill bottled up until next year, the House yesterday blasted the hopes of thousands of Government employes who wished to take advantage of President Roosevelt's promotion plan by refusing to appropriate funds to put it in operation.

Unless the Senate alters the item in the third deficiency appropriations bill, the President's program for giving Federal workers special training courses and an opportunity for promotions based on competitive examinations will be hamstrung until next year.

The House Appropriations Committee allowed $328,500, however, as half-year salaries to permit members of both the House and the Senate to hire one additional clerk each at the beginning of the next session.

Altogether some 1,800 jobs are created by the last deficiency bill. Most of these, however, will be in the field service. Among the agencies which will have the largest additions are: Internal Revenue Bureau, 400; Federal Housing Administration, 350; Civil Aeronautics

2 Prostrated Here At 90 Degrees and No Relief in Sight

Two persons were prostrated here yesterday as the District's heat continued at a 90-degree level for the second day.

The victims were Thelma Johnson, 32, of Chicago, and William Hardy, 22, colored of 416 N street northwest.

Yesterday's peak of 90 was accompanied by a humidity of 53 per cent, 10 degrees above normal. Warm weather is due to remain today, with cloudy skies and local showers during the evening.

$800,000,000 Slum Clearing Program Is Called Up for Almost Certain Extinction

By Robert C. Albright

A House so bent on economy that it yesterday slashed $161,000,000 from the Administration's third deficiency bill, today will be offered the President's $800,000,000 housing measure for almost certain sacrifice.

Decision to ask House consideration of the Administration's housing program followed passage of an Administration deficiency measure trimmed from an original budget estimate of $215,891,000 to a mere $54,000,000.

A protest of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace against elimination of $119,500,000 to restore the Commodity Credit Corporation's capital stock failed to sway the House verdict.

Vote Is 116 to 110

By a 116 to 110 teller vote a motion to restore the sum was defeated despite warnings by Wallace that major farm products might fall in price to 1932 levels, with 25-cent prices or less for corn. Final rejection of the item overturned an earlier division count restoring the fund by a one-vote margin.

A cloud of uncertainty overhung Saturday adjournment prospects as the deficiency bill headed into a Senate farm bloc fight to restore commodity credit funds and a last effort to modify relief act bans on WPA prevailing wages, Federal theater projects and indefinite tenure on WPA rolls.

Rayburn was not optimistic as he announced the decision to seek House right-of-way today on the Administration's bill increasing by $800,000,000 U. S. Housing Authority powers to issue securities and boosting sums available for contributions to public housing agencies.

Leadership Confers

Part of the President's original lending program, the bulk of which was killed Tuesday by blunt House refusal to consider the initial $2,800,000,000 measure, the housing bill's chances were considered no stronger than the main stem of the program.

Subject of day-long leadership conferences on contradictory reports on what would be done with it, agreement to carry the bill to a vote followed Administration insistence that this be done. The President made clear Tuesday that he wanted responsibility fixed for sidetracking the lending bill, and apparently is seeking a similar record on the housing measure.

The vote will come on the same procedure that settled the fate of the lending bill, approval of a rule making the legislation in order. If the rule is voted down, the $800,000,000 slum clearance power will be filed in a pigeonhole alongside the rejected loan bill.

Deadlock on Security

Extraordinary efforts meanwhile were made to free the Administration's social security amendments from a conference deadlock. Rayburn emphasized the need for this legislation at this session. Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, said he had not abandoned hope.

"If we fail to get action, it will be through no fault of the House," said Doughton.

House conferees today are expected to consider a proposal to bring the Senate's Connally amendment, key to the impasse, back to the House for a separate vote.

The disputed Connally amendment requires the Federal Government to put up two-thirds of the first $15 of State old age assistance grants. A majority of the Senate conferees have asserted this amendment must remain, "or there will be no bill." House conferees, stiffened by Administration opposition to the Exactly how jittery Europe is about war is illustrated by the dilemma of Ambassador Davies when he started home from Brussels for his present vacation. His wife's yacht had come over to Europe, and he had been intending to make a leisurely crossing on her instead of on a 5-day liner.

But at the last minute, with some European statesmen saying that the odds for war are 6 to 4, Davies changed his mind.

"How would it look," he ruminated, "if war were to break out and our Ambassador to Belgium were found in midocean on a yacht?"

So he paid his fare on a steamer. Saved money, too.

That brought on more questions about the transfer of other Federal functions to his control, including the Children's Bureau. Someone pointed out that its present chief, Katherine Lenroot, was in the audience. Another man might have been caught short. But McNutt turned to her quick as a flash.

"You'll construe that," he said, "merely as an invitation, I'm sure, Miss Lenroot."

Since all Government activities are ultimately directed at "security" for the individual, there isn't much reason from one point of view why all Government bureaus shouldn't be turned over to McNutt.

Ohioans Ask Taft to Declare For President

Cincinnatians Think He Will Accede, Probably Today

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 2.—Senator Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, today became the first prospective Republican nominee for President to be asked formally to declare his candidacy.

The Hamilton County (Cincinnati) Republican executive committee, by resolution, urged him "to allow his name to be used as first choice of Ohio's delegates to the national convention."

Informed quarters indicated immediately that he would accede, probably in a statement to be issued through his Washington office tomorrow.

Taft is a member of the committee.

"Qualities the Country Needs"

The son of the late President and Chief Justice was Ohio's "favorite son" candidate for the nomination in 1936, but released his delegates as sentiment at the Cleveland convention swung toward Alf M. Landon, then Governor of Kansas.

The resolution adopted today said:

"The Government of the United States . . . is rushing down a road which can only end in inflation and may end in the destruction of democracy itself. Congress by itself may slow the rush toward disaster but it cannot stop it. It can be stopped only by a man of outstanding courage in the White House . . ." The committee said it "believes Robert A. Taft possesses the qualities the country needs."

May Supply 1940 Clews

Ohio and New Jersey probably will come nearer than any other States this fall to supplying a clew to the voter's thoughts in advance of the 1940 elections.

The picture will be sketchy even in these two States. Neither of them elects candidates subject to a State-wide vote. Ohio's cities elect mayors. New Jersey elects county and city officers, seven State Senators and a full set of assemblymen.

In both States issues are chiefly local. The voting in Ohio is largely restricted to city-dwellers, away from the farms where the biggest turnovers occurred last fall.

Despite the obvious weaknesses in these elections as 1940 gauges, the two States probably will provide a better sample of bipartisan electoral sentiment than will others in which the principal contests are within the Democratic Party.

Hearings Today On Rules Planned For Liquor Ads

Public hearings on proposed regulations of liquor advertising will open today at 9:30 a. m. before the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board in the District Building.

According to District officials, the proposed new rules are based on the code of the Federal Alcohol Administration. One which is due for a severe test from licensees proposed to hold down the size of display signs to 10 square feet.

Bans are proposed on Santa Claus pictures in ads, religious or semi-religious figures, symbols or characters; mention of church, school, college or university or any athletic contest or game, and pictures of children, nude women or seminude women.

Japan Relying On Spirit to Defeat Navies of World

Shanghai, Aug. 2 (AP).—Despite an inferior in tonnage the Japanese navy is relying on "Japanese spirit" to defeat any navy or combination of navies in the world, a naval spokesman said today. The spokesman was commenting on Admiral William D. Leahy's final annual report as United States chief of naval operations.

(In the report, Admiral Leahy asserted the United States fleet after reinforcement in accordance with its current program would be able "to defeat the fleet of any single naval power . . .)

The Japanese spokesman said that "the Japanese navy is convinced it has enough strength not to be defeated by any navy in the world."

Against a combination of navies, he said, "results are unpredictable, but the Japanese navy . . . has full confidence of ability to deal with any circumstances . . ."

Head of Disaster Work of Red Cross To Succeed Elwood Street at $8,000 Salary; Formal Anouncement Due Tomorrow

Robert Earl Bondy yesterday accepted the post of welfare director for the District at $8,000 a year.

The long series of conferences of the Board of Public Welfare to name a successor to Elwood Street thus ended in satisfaction on the part of board members and the District Commissioners.

In his first official statement, Bondy, who now is director of disaster relief for the American Red Cross, said the "Government is in the business of social welfare which is here to stay."

With his 20 years' experience with the Red Cross, Bondy brings to the welfare post a wealth of experience in dealing with problems peculiar to this agency, which was a strong point in the welfare board's recommendation and the official approval by the Commissioners.

Actually the Commissioners will officially designate him welfare director at their regular meeting tomorrow. He expects to clear his work at the Red Cross by September 1, and in any event, not later than September 15. He will be sworn into office when he has finished his work at the Red Cross.

After a meeting yesterday with the Board of Public Welfare, Bondy said he had been promised by the Commissioners they would recommend a $500 boost in his salary in the next appropriations act. He also conferred with District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan on matters pertaining to routine retirement pay which affects all District employes.

He expressed the view that job of directing public welfare in the Nation's Capital was particularly "challenging" since "what Congress does for the needy here is an indication on the Nation's policy."

When he takes over his duties he said he expects to find a "happy and smooth running situation."

Commissioner George E. Allen pledged the new appointee that the Commissioners will "back him up" in his job of caring for the District's charges.

A resident of Bethesda, Md., Bondy is 43 and has two children. One of his neighbors is Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the District Board of Tax Appeals.

Apropos to the task ahead, Bondy said the work in disaster relief was "about as tough" as any that will probably come up in his work as welfare director.

Congress GOP 'Irresponsible,' Says Wallace

Warns Failure to Give Commodity Unit Funds May Lower Prices

Republicans in Congress form "the best organized and most irresponsible opposition" to the policies of a prevailing administration that Washington has seen in recent times, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace declared yesterday.

"And what do they stand for?" he asked.

The Agriculture Secretary warned that the failure of the House Appropriations Committee to include in the deficiency appropriation bill a $119,599,000 item to replenish impaired capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation might result in a drop in farm prices to 1932 levels late this year.

Echoing a note twice sounded by President Roosevelt, he said if this happened the responsibility would rest solely with Congress.

Before the press conference Wallace had lunched with Mr. Roosevelt, who presumably approved the statement.

Failure of Congress to include the Commodity Credit Corporation item in the deficiency bill, he said, virtually means that the Agriculture Department commodity loan program "will be tossed out the window."

As a result, farmers may get about 35 cents per bushel for corn instead of 55 cents, he said. Hog prices may drop accordingly. This, in time, may mean cheaper lard, which would knock down cottonseed oil prices, and thus reduce severely income in the South. Prices of other farm products also might be hit.

Wallace was inclined to blame Republicans for the action on the commodity credit capital impairment item, although he said certain Democrats went along with them.

Afterward, the House in passing the deficiency bill sustained the action of the Appropriations Committee.

The item would have given the Commodity Credit Corporation about $128,000,000 to make commodity loans, and thus keep surpluses off the market for the purpose of bolstering prices, up to the time Congress reconvenes. At present, Wallace declared, the corporation has only about $9,000,000 in unobligated funds for this purpose.

It has, he said, $131,000,000, but $122,000,000 of this has been obligated. Wallace explained that he could cancel these commitments and reapportion the money among different commodities on some kind of equitable basis. But this would not keep the commodity loan program going until the next session, he declared.

11,000 to Lose Administration WPA Offices

355 Will Be Dropped Here, 65 in Maryland And 145 in Virginia

By the Associated Press.

WPA officials have informed Congress they intend to cut about 11,000 administrative employes off the rolls in the next two or three months.

The central office here will lose 300, the District of Columbia office 55, Maryland 65, Virginia 145 and West Virginia 175.

Dallas Dort, assistant WPA commissioner, told a House appropriations sub-committee in testimony made public yesterday that the Work Projects Administration's administrative personnel would be cut from 30,500 to about 20,000 by the end of September.

Dort furnished this information in requesting authority for the WPA to use an additional $2,000,000 of its funds to give the terminated employes their accrued annual leave.

Aides of WPA Commissioner Harrington said yesterday he would let stand, for the present at least, his July 29 order which held back the automatic dismissal of long-time WPA workers.

The approximately 650,000 who have been on WPA 18 consecutive months or more are affected.

House action killing the lending bill for this session, Works Projects officials said, did not mean that no further attempts would be made at this session of Congress to modify relief act requirements that long-time WPA enrollees be dismissed with permission to apply for recertification for relief after a 30-day period.

Harrington stopped further dismissals under the relief act when the Senate adopted an amendment to the lending bill to provide that veteran WPA workers should not be dropped if they were in need, if their project might suffer or if the individual would encounter personal hardships.

Senators Aim Relief Riders at Deficiency Bill

Prepare Last Fight To Restore Prevailing Wage, Continuous Work

A last desperate effort to modify strict requirements of the 1940 relief act will be made on the floor of the Senate, in an attempt to attach riders to the third deficiency bill when it comes up for consideration as almost the final legislative act of the session.

Restoration of the prevailing wage rate to WPA workers will be demanded by Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, who declared yesterday that he thought his amendment would be approved. The Senate adopted the prevailing wage when it was considering the 1940 relief act in June, but the provision was stricken out in conference.

Who Will Kill Them?

"The prevailing wage—and most of the other proposed alterations in the relief law—will probably be subject to points of order when the attempt is made to tack them on to the deficiency bill. It was pointed out yesterday, however, that it may be difficult to find a Senator willing to take the responsibility for thus killing any of the amendments.

In any case, Senator McCarran said he thought he could obtain the two-thirds vote necessary to suspend the Senate rules and thereby eliminate points of order.

Also optimistic was Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, who plans to offer an amendment striking out the requirement that after 18 months' continuous work on WPA, the relief recipient must be dropped for at least 30 days. Indorsed by the Senate last week, this amendment was added to the self-liquidating loan bill, but that measure died in the House.

Pepper to Back Theaters

An amendment to revive the defunct Federal theater project will be offered by Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida.

A fourth amendment, preventing slashes in the monthly security wage of relief workers in the North is expected, probably sponsored by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina. This proposal is designed to soften the present law, which raises Southern wages but requires the national average labor cost to remain at its June 30 level.

A possible obstacle to adjournment was foreseen yesterday if the Senate actually adopts one or more of the various relief law modifications. House members of the conference committee would be headed by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, leader of the economy bloc and an adamant opponent of changes in the present relief act.

Bridges Asks Quiz Of 3 PWA Projects In Nebraska

Senator Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, submitted a resolution yesterday to authorize a $100,000 investigation of three Public Works Administration projects in Nebraska.

The PWA had committed the Government, Senator Bridges charged, to three hydro-electric and reclamation projects which had been turned down by the Engineer Corps of the United States Army or by its own engineers as impracticable.

In the case of the Platte River project, taken over by the Federal Power Commission on the "fiction" that it was a navigable stream, he declared the bed of the stream had been dry for 100 miles below the site of the Kingsley Dam.

In the case of the Central Valley project, the resolution charged that waters of the Platte River which were to be diverted had already been over-appropriated by water-users, while the Loup River project, he said, was undertaken soon after an adverse report by the Army engineers as impracticable.

3 Craft Unions Denied Right To Bargain

Leiserson in New Labor Board Majority; Madden Dissents Sharply

By the United Press.

A new National Labor Relations Board majority yesterday denied bargaining rights to three A. F. of L. craft unions in a decision which the board's dissenting chairman said favored C. I. O. industrial unionism "unfairly."

William M. Leiserson, new member of the board, teamed with Edwin S. Smith for the first time in deciding the American Can Co. case at Brooklyn, but did not agree in their reasons for reaching the same conclusion.

The majority ruling dismissed representation petitions filed by the Operating Engineers, the Firemen and Oilers, and the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, A. F. of L. unions, which sought to split their craft off from the industrial unit under contract with the Steel Workers Organizing Committee (C. I. O.).

Sharp Dissent

Chairman J. Warren Madden's dissent was sharp. He asserted that the majority's decision "for all practical purposes" denied the craft form of organization the right to exist in the company's plants and enunciated a principle which "will result in a wide diversity of bargaining units within a particular type of industry."

He charged that the decision represented a departure from the board's famed "globe doctrine," under which the workers in a craft are given the right to decide whether they wish separate representation or inclusion in the plant-wide unit.

Leiserson said he did not believe that the board had authority under the Wagner act to split an appropriate unit which had been established by collective bargaining, but both Madden and Smith disagreed with this statement. They also disagreed with Leiserson's statements that granting the A. F. of L.'s petitions would leave the craft groups "free to disregard contractual obligations," and would constitute "setting aside a provision of a valid contract."

C. I. O. Protests Changes

The decision came as C. I. O. officials from New York, Massachusetts, Alabama and Wisconsin were protesting to the Senate Labor Committee against any changes in the Wagner act.

"The real reason for the attack upon the act and the (Labor Relations) Board," said Allan S. Haywood, president of the New Industrial Union Council, "is that a small minority of powerful corporate interests in this country have found themselves in a position where they are no longer free to engage in unlawful practices.

Michael F. Widman, jr., president of the Massachusetts Industrial Union Council; Yelverton Cowherd, secretary-treasurer of the Alabama Industrial Union Council, and Gunnar Mickelsen, secretary-treasurer of the Wisconsin Industrial Union Council, also expressed opposition to the amendments in statements prepared for the committee.

Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, a member of the delegation, expressed the belief President Roosevelt would not seek a third term, remarking: "I think he wants to control the convention and name the candidate."

Other members of the delegation were Senate Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island; Representatives Holmes (Republican), of Massachusetts; Church (Republican), of Illinois; Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa; Johnson (Republican), of Indiana; Treadway (Republican), of Massachusetts; Barnes (Democrat), of Illinois; Crowe (Democrat), of Indiana; Thrill (Republican), of Wisconsin; Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, and Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska.

U. S. to Press Lepke Search Across Nation

Special Federal Jury Will Open Sessions On Racketeer Monday

By the Associated Press.

New York, Aug. 2.—The Government disclosed today that a special grand jury had been summoned to act as an extraordinary national clearing house for information to lead investigators to the hiding places of Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, New York racket boss, and other long-hunted fugitives.

With this step, which Federal authorities said had the approval of Attorney General Murphy, the saturnine Lepke became the most sought-after man in the country.

Already there hangs over the head of the gangster—described by District Attorney Dewey as the most dangerous industrial racketeer in the United States—a $25,000 dead-or-alive city reward.

500,000 Pages of Reports

The additional Federal grand jury—it will be the eighth sitting here—will hold its opening session Monday. Before it, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation will take the most encyclopedic mass of information about criminals ever assembled in one grand jury room—86 reports aggregating more than 500,000 pages.

The inquiry will draw witnesses from Cleveland and other cities as far west as the Mississippi, and information also will be sought from the Pacific Coast and the Southwestern border. (Cleveland was the only city specifically mentioned, and nothing was said in amplification.)

Whenever evidence of crimes committed in other districts is turned up it will be put in the records here and sent along to the jurisdiction involved.

War of Extermination

Whatever evidence of State law violation is dredged up will be handed over to the State prosecutors involved, along with requests for co-operation with Federal authorities of any Federal crimes.

The tempo of the long hunt for Lepke—he has been a Federal and State fugitive for two years as an accused racketeer in the bakery and garment industries and a dabbler in narcotics—was stepped up with the assassination last week of Isadore Penn.

Penn, a quiet Bronx householder, whose only record was that of a good citizen, was killed by gunners who mistook him, Dewey said, for a prosecution witness against Lepke. This, the prosecutor added, was the fifth murder in a "war of extermination" in which Lepke was desperately involved against his former associates.

District Mother Of 2 Dies After Taking Poison

Mrs. Elsie McCauley, 43-year-old mother of two children, died in Emergency Hospital yesterday after her husband, Howard, carried her there in an attempt to frustrate her suicide effort. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Neighbors said that Mrs. McCauley, who lives at 2813 Quarry road northwest, was in good spirits last night and even "took a ride to Washington airport with the children and had ice cream and hot dogs." Last Sunday, they said, she spent the day at North Beach and seemed happy. McCauley told police that his wife had been in poor health for more than a year.

Mrs. McCauley woke her husband early yesterday and told him she had swallowed poison, a member of the family said.

Her husband, a married daughter of 19, and a 4-year-old son, Richard, survive her.

Duce's Conference With King Stirs World Curiosity

Rome, Aug. 2 (U.P.).—An hour-long conference today between Premier Mussolini and King Victor Emmanuel at Cameri Airport aroused the deep interest in foreign diplomats and revived speculation that while the world's eyes are turned on Danzig, another situation may be brewing elsewhere.

The tendency among the diplomats to attach importance to the Cameri conference coincided with revived interest in the Balkins, fed by the Fascist press. Italian newspapers suddenly took a deep interest in Hungarian-Rumanian border incidents, of which three were reported at length within the last 48 hours.

Foreign diplomatic quarters continue persistently to hint that a crisis really is due in September. Preparations for it are being worked out carefully in quiet but vital behind-the-scenes consultations between the axis partners as provided for in the Rome-to-Berlin military alliance.

Gaming's Admiral Holds Ship As Lesser Boats Surrender

Tony Bars Writ-Laden Officers From His Craft, Says He's Within Rights; Squirts More Water After Brief Truce

By the Associated Press

Santa Monica, Calif., Aug. 2.—Anthony Cornero Stralla, San Francisco waterfront lad, who made good on the high seas, is still in command of his pride and joy, the Rex, "flagship" of southern California's gambling fleet.

He refused writ-laden officers permission to board his neon-trimmed ship last night and was still holding out late today.

Three other gambling boats "surrendered" last night to State, county and municipal authorities, under the direction of State Attorney General Earl Warren, who went out to serve warrants charging violations of the State's anti-gambling code.

Tony told the officers he was fully within his legal rights. Then he squirted water on them.

Stralla, better known since the bootleg whisky era as Tony Cornero, is charged with conspiracy and bookmaking.

"The Rex is still in a state of siege and will continue to be until Cornero has surrendered," Warren declared.

Cornero and most of his 200 employes remained aboard the Rex, hemmed in by a flotilla of small boats carrying Attorney General's aides, district attorney's investigators and sheriff's deputies.

During the night Warren arranged a truce with Cornero to allow several hundred men and women patrons to go ashore from the Rex. After the patrons were evacuated, the truce was declared void and the water squirting resumed. Officers remained just out of squirting range.

Britain to Bury Radium in War As Safeguard

London, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—A hole 50 feet deep, to be used for burying precious but highly dangerous radium out of reach of bombings in wartime, was completed at Mount Vernon Hospital, Northwood, Middlesex.

Dr. John Read, hospital physicist, said 20 grams of radium worth £100,000 ($468,000) would be sent there from neighboring hospitals in event of war.

"The reason for these elaborate precautions," he said, "is the tremendous lethal properties of uncontrolled radium. If 20 grams were hit by a bomb, the area over which they were dispersed might become a death trap for many years."

3-Power Pact Parley Continues

Moscow, Aug. 2 (A.P.).—Another in the long series of conferences between Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff and British and French envoys on the proposed three-power mutual aid pact was held late today in the Kremlin.

The negotiations were said to be proceeding at "their customary tempo." Results were not disclosed.

Foreign observers expressed belief Russia might refuse to join the British-French agreement except on unreserved acceptance of Moscow's formula covering "indirect aggression" in the Baltic area.

Work-to-Get Relief in Effect InPennsylvania

Law Designed to Cut Costs; Separate From Federal Projects

By the Associated Press

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 2.—Pennsylvania officials, putting into effect a "work or get off relief" law affecting more than 200,000 persons, began searching today for jobs with which to make the new plan work.

The law was designed to cut relief costs that have been averaging $100,000,000 a year. It was passed in the closing days of the recent Republican-controlled Legislature, over protests of opponents and representatives of labor that the act would mean "forced labor."

Pennsylvania has 763,990 persons on relief now. Of these only one member of a family was certified as employable to get the plan working. Consequently, the State expects the number available for work to increase in future surveys.

The able-bodied are to be given jobs on county projects separate from Federal works projects. The law stipulates that "prevailing wages" must be paid.

In another slash of the bill for public assistance, the State, in six months, has regained $500,000 by prosecuting persons who took relief they did not deserve. The total that will be recovered from these "chiselers" will total $1,000,000 by the end of the year, officials estimate.

Danzig Fuehrer Pledges Death of Versailles Treaty

By the Associated Press.

Free City of Danzig, Aug. 2.—Albert Forster, fiery Nazi district leader of Danzig, tonight promised the destruction of "the last 10 per cent of the Treaty of Versailles."

Uppermost in the minds of his listeners was this city's promised "return to the Reich."

At the same time the smooth-spoken leader reassured Danzigers that they were "protected against any surprises."

The Nazi party newspaper, Vorposten, said three Polish customs officers violated the Danzig border but withdrew at a warning shot. Polish soldiers at Tczew, the paper said, threw stones at a train carrying German vacationists home from Danzig.

Doctors Fight U. S. 'Coercion,' A.M.A. Admits

Journal Charges 'Course of Prosecution' Despite Court Ruling

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—The Journal of the American Medical Association tonight charged editorially that the Justice Department sought to "undermine the confidence of the people in the medical profession" and asserted that doctors "will fight to the finish."

The editorial was based on the action of Federal District Judge James M. Proctor, who recently quashed an indictment charging the Association, three other medical organizations and 21 prominent physicians with violating the anti-trurt law, and subsequent moves of the Justice Department.

The Justice Department filed an appeal and reported it was possible that the case would be carried directly to the Supreme Court. The Journal said the department also issued a press release "to inform physicians generally that, until the Supreme Court has acted, the Government policy toward boycots in the medical profession is unchanged."

"Course of Prosecution"

"The conclusion seems inescapable that the Department of Justice has embarked on a course of prosecution if not persecution of the medical profession with a view to forcing its contentions as to what should be the nature of medical practice in the United States," the editorial set forth.

"Not satisfied with this (Judge Proctor's) decision, the Department of Justice proposes to continue to seek to undermine the confidence of the people in the medical profession. The question may well be asked as to whether or not this is justice or persecution. . . .

"The opinion of Justice Proctor is an inspiration to continuous effort in behalf of a free profession. The medical profession will not be coerced, threatened, abused or otherwise maltreated, and it will fight to the finish when its high traditions demand righteous resistance."

Studying Not Working Time, Employers Told

The Labor Department ruled yesterday that employers are not required, under the wage-hour law, to compensate employes for time spent on study outside working hours even when the employer pays the tuition for the courses.

George A. McNulty, general counsel of the wage-hour division, issued the ruling to clarify a recetn bulletin which said that time spent by employes at meetings or lectures should be considered working time, subject to compensation, if attendance was not voluntary or if the meeting or lecture was directly "related to the employe's work."

Bridges Admits His Union Got Communist Aid

Chief of Longshoremen Reiterates Denial of Party Membership

San Francisco, Aug. 2 (AP).—Harry Bridges, fighting deportation to his native Australia, testified today he believed the employer class could not be eliminated "except by poison or something," admitted his longshore union had received Communist aid and said he once jokingly said he was a member of that party.

He said the longshoremen had received aid from the Communist Party during the 1934 waterfront strike here, and he knew union men who were Communists, although he reiterated his denial he was a member of the party or ever had paid dues, as a Government witness had testified.

To support its charge that the West Coast C. I. O. leader is a deportable alien the Government is trying to prove that he is a member of the Communist Party and that the party advocates the violent overthrow of the Government.

"Ridiculous" Question

The "poison" remark came with a grin after Bridges had testified he did not think employers could be eliminated "by the ballot or any other means." Thomas B. Shoemaker, chief Government counsel at the trial on Angel Island, followed up with the question, "Do you believe they should be eliminated?"

Bridges replied he thought the question "rather ridiculous—as long as we have a democratic form of government."

"I have no love for the employers," Bridges said, "but a move to destroy them would destroy the democratic form of government, so I don't see how anyone could bring about elimination of employers."

Communism Disavowed

Bridges previously testified he did not believe the Communist party was subversive.

"Have you ever had reason to deny you were a Communist?" asked Shoemaker.

"Plenty of times."

Bridges testified that "red baiting" had become such a standing joke at the maritime convention in 1935 that everyone gave the Communist salute and addressed the chairman as "commissar chairman."

"Do you believe in our form of government?" Shoemaker asked.

"I most certainly do." Then he was asked to define his idea of democracy.

"Briefly stated, I would say it is ruled by the majority in the interests of the majority."

"Do you believe in the capitalistic form of government?"

Bridges replied that democracy and capitalism were different.

Communist Aid Given

"If you mean the capitalistic form of society, which to me means the exploitation of a lot of people for profit, I haven't got much use for it."

Bridge admitted the longshoremen had received aid from the Communist Party. Shoemaker asked whether the "Communist Party was beneficial or detrimental to the labor movement as a whole."

"I don't know," Bridges replied thoughtfully. "I've known instances where the Communist policy, if carried out to its logical conclusion, would be detrimental. In other instances, I would say it would be beneficial. The Communist members of our union have generally been good union men and generally fought for democratic trade union principles."

Shoemarker asked whether the good factors outweighed the bad.

Makes Several Denials

He said he believed the Communist Party had supported him as well as other candidates in union elections, but asked whether he ever sought such support, Bridges answered: "No, we don't work that way . . ."

He denied having said that workers should take over the factories.

Bridges also denied having said the United States should have "a planned economy" like Soviet Russia's.

Asked whether he supported "a revolutionary workers government" as reportedly outlined in a marine workers industrial union membership book, Bridges answered:

"If that means by force of arms, especially against the democratic government, I am opposed to it."

Mrs. Stinson Wins Annulment

arate suit which has not yet been called up. Justice Luhring had announced in April that he would pass on the question as it had been brought up during the annulment suit.

Stinson had maintained during the trial that Mrs. Crounse had made all the overtures of marriage, and had set up the trust fund and given him other money on her own initiative.

For a year or so prior to the marriage on September 27, 1937, the court found, Mrs. Crounse had been administered sedative and hypnotic drugs. If given in sufficient doses, the court found, these drugs produce "emotional disturbances" and cause "haziness or fogginess." "The judgment is impaired; there is lack of comprehension, amnesia, and a tendency to sleep if left alone," the judgment stated.

Mrs. Crounse had taken so much of these drugs by the time of her marriage, the court stated, that "she did not know what she was doing." The court also found that the marriage was not only not consummated, but "at no time ratified or validated by the plaintiff."

Mrs. Crounse, who was already listed under that name in the telephone book before the decision, would make no comment yesterday at her home, 2419 Wisconsin avenue northwest. Known also as "Pepita Crounse," she is the author of two books of poems, "Through Remembered Windows" and "Fold of Dreams." She was sole heir to the $700,000 estate of her husband, who died in 1925.

Less than a month after her marriage to Stinson, they separated on October 17, 1937, and Mrs. Crounse filed suit for annulment the following May. She was granted an early trial this year on her plea that the nervous strain of waiting until December would further impair her health.

Deficiency Bill Slashed, Passed

Connally plan, have refused to yield.

Still undetermined, following repeated leadership conferences, was the fate of three sets of wage-hour act amendments. Chairman Sabath, of the House Rules Committee, filed a long-deferred committee report providing rules for House consideration, but neither Sabath nor Rayburn would predict House action.

While labor organizations and the Administration itself prefers no action, the Rules Committee last week gave the go-ahead signal. If consideration is ordered, the House must choose between the Norton bill reported by the Labor Committee, exempting a restricted field of farm labor; a substitute by Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, providing wide agricultural exemptions, and another substitute by Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, offering only "non-controversial" amendments. Rayburn was in conference with backers of all three yesterday before announcing: "No decision."

While the House raced through the third deficiency bill, the Senate yesterday put in an unproductive day waiting for the measure. Action appeared assured, however, on the long-blockaded bill authorizing the United States Government to undertake construction of naval or military equipment for Latin and South American republics at cost. The Senate Foreign Relations Committee ordered a favorable report on the bill already passed by the House.

Adjournment Outlook

The pessimistic adjournment outlook centered almost entirely on the House 75 per cent cut in the third deficiency bill and the reception of that measure in the Senate. Not only will farm bloc members attempt to restore slashed commodity credit funds, but Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, will renew his effort to make $612,000,000 of Federal farm mortgage funds available for farm debt refinancing. On the same measure, a fight to modify the relief act will break. If any or all of such changes are made, a prolonged conference controversy threatens. The bill still must move through the Senate Appropriations Committee and may not be reported before Friday.

Today's scheduled House consideration of the housing bill rule was not regarded as an adjournment threat. The Senate already has passed the bill, and the House is free to take it or leave it. So slim were its chances on the basis of recent polls, that it was deliberately held up until after the lending bill vote, which it was thought would be stronger. In a last-minute effort to soften opposition to the rule, Administration promises of substantial modification are expected to be made in today's debate.

Only one major restoration was made to the sharply cut third deficiency bill as passed by the House yesterday—addition of $1,000,000 for the Wages and Hours administration. This was a compromise on the $2,000,000 asked by the Administration, but eliminated by the committee.

Representative Norton Assails Cut

Assailing this cut, Chairman Norton, of the House Labor Committee, charged opponents of the wage-hour law were doing by indirection what "they did not dare do" by direction. She declared it would cripple administration of the act. Chairman Woodrum, of the deficiencies subcommittee replied that twice as much already has been provided to administer the law as was appropriated for 1939. In the end, Woodrum agreed to the $1,000,000 compromise, and the House approved it.

In reporting the last deficiency measure, Chairman Taylor of the Appropriations Committee called the cuts "quite drastic," but added: "Faced with the records of the sessions thus far of appropriations greatly exceeding in the aggregate the sum total of budget estimates, the committee felt constrained to prune wherever such course would seemingly do no hurt and thus narrow the margin of difference."

In removing the entire $119,599,918 for restoring capital impairment of the Commodity Credit Corporation, the committee pointed out that without capital replenishment and discounting any income from sale of collateral held for direct loans there remained around $150,000,000 for making or underwriting additional loans on commodities.

In addition, the committee reduced the proposed outlay for acquisition of strategic war materials from $25,000,000 to $10,000,000, and rejected a proposal to add to the public buildings program to provide two new Federal structures for each Congressional district. Rejected also was the Securities and Exchange Commission's request for $102,000 for regulation of over-the-counter markets and the commission's new office in London.

Defense program items were cut, but less drastically in proportion to other provisions of the bill. The $7,300,000 recommended for the civilian pilot training program was cut to $3,000,0000, enough to train only 7,500 students, half the number asked by the Civil Aeronautics Authority. Also rejected was $246,022 for research studies to improve methods of selecting the students.

$2,939,201 for Navy

A total of $2,939,201 was included for the Navy. The committee recommended a direct appropriation of $2,070,000, plus a $24,338,500 contractual authorization, for the Navy to carry out a program for improvement of navy yards. For starting work on a $2,000,000 dirigible, $300,000 was included, with authority for entering contracts for the balance.

For the War Department, $8,437,300 was appropriated, plus $8,500,000 in contractual authorizations, covering a $4,000,000 base at Kodiak, Alaska, and $8,000,000 apiece for a new air depot in the Southeast and at Ogden, Utah. A $10,000,000 appropriation and contractual authorization was approved for the establishment of an aviation research plant, with the choice of location left to the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics.

the services the group of 50 early fliers and invited guests went to Fort Myer to witness the re-enactment of the first Army test flight and then were Mrs. Bryant's guests at luncheon.

At Wright Field, meanwhile, warplanes zoomed in formation to signalize the strength of army air power today.

World Marks Broken

A four-motored super "Flying Fortress" averaged 166.32 miles per hour, carrying 4,400 pounds of "payload" over a distance of 3,107 miles, to establish a new record.

Another mark was chalked up by a standard, four-motored "Flying Fortress" which climbed to 33,400 feet with a load in excess of 11,000 pounds. The record, previously held by Germany, was "exceeded liberally," the Wright Field press officer said.

Speaking at a luncheon at Wright Field, Gen. Arnold declared, "We have done this without 'souping up' our engines, without putting alcohol in our gasoline, clipping the wings of our planes, or flying motors which last only five hours. Moreover, we used standard equipment with full military loads."

The open house at the field, he added, is part of the Army's policy of showing its equipment to the public.

"The time is past when we can keep our light under a bushel basket," he said. "It's your Air Corps and your airplanes."

Letters of commendation from Secretary of War Woodring were presented to Brig. Gen. Frederic E. Humphreys, of the New York National Guard and Col. Frank T. Lahm, air officer of the Second Corps Area. Humphreys was the first and Lahm the second officer to pilot an Army airplane. Another commendatory letter was read and sent to the family of Lieut. Thomas E. Selfridge, first Army officer to fly and the first to die in a plane crash.

4 Get Flying Cross.

Arnold then pinned the distinguished flying cross on Maj. Carl F. Greene and Capt. Alfred H. Johnson for pioneering in stratosphere flying and on Capt. George B. Holloman and Carl J. Crane for developing the automatic landing system.

Attending the ceremonies at the National Museum and at Fort Myer were Maj. E. E. Hildreth, of Gen. Arnold's office; Capt. Charles H. Deerwester, representing the commandant of Bolling Field; Maj. Augustus Post, pioneer flier, who timed the famous test flight; E. Hodgson Smart, who painted the portrait in the Museum of the late Gen. George O. Squier, who wrote the specifications for the original plane; Mrs. Mary Squier Parker, sister of Gen. Squier; Dr. Alexander Wetmore, director of the Museum; Paul E. Garber, curator of areonautics for the Museum; Thomas T. Hildebrant, who flow a glider over Baltimore in 1909; Capt. Horace B. Wild, who soloed in 1905; Col. Harold A. C. Hartney, Roland Rohlfs, Frederick Fox, Edward H. Young, and B. Russell Shaw.

Pat J. Mahan, flying motion picture star, who had been expected to attend, left early yesterday for New York to answer a radio appeal for a blood transfusion for a man stricken with an infection. He was represented by Mrs. Mahan.

Baby Is Returned To Foster Mother

Justice Goldsborough brushed aside the Board of Public Welfare's contention that Mrs. Perna was too poor to support her foster daughter, on her pay of $85 a month as a practical nurse.

"Half the homes in the United States face similar financial difficulties," he commented, "what counts more is a mother's love."

Assistant Corporation Counsel Michael Keane said the record would be referred to Corporation Counsel Seal for decision, on an appeal.

Testimony in the habeas corpus hearing went back to five years ago when Mrs. Perna, then the wife of Ramon Perna, a nightclub headwaiter, got the 2-week-old baby from Mrs. Annie L. Grover. She said she allowed Mrs. Perna to take the baby on promise of adoption. Mrs. Grover said the Pernas paid her $100.

Pern later sued his wife for a divorce, the testimony showed, and charged her with trying to make him think the baby was her own. Justice Goldsborough ridiculed the idea that Perna was taken by such a deception when he was living with his wife at the time.

Kept Child Five Years

When it was argued that Mrs. Perna took the baby for this motive, Justice Goldsborough replied: "God knows she didn't keep her five years for that motive."

The divorce action was withdrawn by mutual consent and later Perna obtained an annulment of the marriage, charging his wife's divorce from her previous husband, more than 15 years ago, was irregular.

Mrs. Perna kept the child, sometimes at her apartment, often at boarding homes, without molestation until July 22 this year, she said. Then, she said, officers took the child away.

Unable to find her child or to learn why it was taken, Mrs. Perna filed a petition for habeas corpus day before yesterday. Upon this Justice Luhring ordered welfare and police officials to show cause why the child should not be returned to her.

Keane moved to dismiss the petition yesterday, contending that only Juvenile Court had jurisdiction over the child.

Douglas L. Hatch, Mrs. Perna's counsel, retorted that the foster mother had both a maternal and financial interest in "Patsy," but that the Juvenile Court procedure gave her no opportunity to defend her claims. Consequently, Hatch said, Mrs. Perna was being deprived of her baby without due process of law, and was entitled to claim the aid of the higher court.

Justice Ends Dispute

Justice Goldsborough abruptly ended this argument by announcing that he would take jurisdiction in the case.

Mrs. Grover then told how she had taken the newly born "Patsy" from her mother and given her to Mrs. Perna. She often has seen the baby since, she said, and observed that she was well taken care of.

"I wouldn't want to go on living without her," Mrs. Perna told the court.

Mrs. Perna said she intended to adopt the baby, but never got the formalities attended to because of her divorce and other difficulties.

The hearing dragged on until 6 p. m., when the lawyers argued bitterly over a stipulation which was to conclude the evidence.

"I'm ready to rule whenever you gentlemen get through," Justice Goldsborough interrupted them. After a brief interview with "Patsy" he gave his opinion.

Endurance Fliers After 2d Record

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—Hunter and Humphrey Moody, who smashed the world endurance record for light planes yesterday, entered their eleventh day in the air late today and radioed that their new objective was the 653-hour mark for heavy planes.

"We're getting more tired each hour," they messaged, "but we intend to stay up indefinitely and go after the record for heavy planes."

At 10 p. m. (E. S. T.) they had been aloft 246 hours.

Indictments accusing Jack F. Freshour, treasurer of the Federal Power Commission Employes Federal Credit Union, of embezzlement and larceny of sums totaling $1,609.79, were among 37 indictments handed up to Justice T. Alan Goldsborough yesterday by the District grand jury.

Chamberlain Wins Parliament Recess

after its defeat the government's adjournment motion was passed 245 to 129. It provided that the House reassemble October 3.

In connection with Chamberlain's declaration of Britain's preparedness against an emergency, which many believed would come this fall, it was announced that 180 small vessels—mostly mine layers and sweepers and escort vessels—would be added to the nation's 1939 naval program at a cost of about £11,000,000 (approximately $51,480,000).

The bitter, five-hour debate on adjournment was opened by Labor Leader Arthur Greenwood. Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal spokesman, and Churchill, who argued that the next two months were likely to be so critical that Parliament should remain in touch with the situation.

Liberal Geoffrey Mander made one of the most bitte. attacks of the day on Chamberlain.

The prime minister's attitude," he said, "has confirmed the worst fears of all those who think that directly Parliament is up (recessed), there will be a tremendous move in the direction of appeasement and that the prime minister will do all in his power to bring about a situation which will place us in the gravest danger."

Churchill painted a gloomy picture of the European situation, describing it as "graver than this time last year"—on the eve of the crisis over Czecho-Slovakia.

He said masses of German troops now were gathered all along the Polish border "and every preparation is being made for a speedy advance."

"Who can doubt that there is going to be a supreme trial of will power, if not a supreme trial of arms?" he asked.

"It seems to me that at this moment . . . it would be disastrous, pathetic, indeed shameful, for the House of Commons to write itself off as an effective and valid factor in the situation or to reduce any strength it can offer to the firm front with which the nation will face aggression."

Drive Begun to Rid Prince Georges of Gambling Casinos

By Joseph M. Mathias

Jimmy LaFontaine's Place, gambling resort of Washington's elite, was under strict surveillance yesterday as State's Attorney H. Winship Wheatley, jr., began in bizarre style a drive to wipe out all violations of the gambling statutes in Prince Georges County.

Corp. John F. Dent and Officer Charles Thomser, of the Prince Georges County police, acting under orders from the State's Attorney, posted themselves at the entrance to the famous casino on Bladensburg road just over the District line and took the tag numbers of every patron.

120 An Hour Recorded

"These persons," Wheatley said, "will be summoned to testify before the grand jury.

"Every suspected gambling establishment in the county will be investigated, one at a time, and we are starting at the top."

After half a day at the entrance to LaFontaine's, Corp. Dent said he had recorded an average of 120 persons an hour entering the private driveway that leads into the parking lot surrounding the big white mansion.

"Not only are we checking on who enter the place," Corp. Dent said, "but we also are keeping track of how long they stay."

No secrecy was employed. The police car was parked in plain view of passersby, and many furtive glances were cast in its direction.

One man, driving an automobile with diplomatic tags, entered the driveway, but after seeing the squad car quickly turned around and drove off, abashed, and with his eyes fixed straight ahead.

A colored taxi driver turned into Jimmy's drive, then stopped and approached the police.

"I didn't mean to go in there," he said apologetically. "I was looking for Eastern avenue, but I took the wrong turn."

Police estimated 75 per cent of the cars entering the grounds bore District tags and a large percentage of these were taxis. They also noted a number of Jimmy's "limousines," making regular trips to and from the establishment.

The new drive against Jimmy's recalled the "campaign of harassment" against the notorious casino by Washington police several years ago.

Has Been Under Fire

When the District Highway Department decided to extend Eastern avenue to Bladensburg road, it was discovered that part of the fence surrounding the establishment was in the District. Workmen leveled the fence in one day, and a squad of Washington police stood around taking down tag numbers of those who entered.

The spectacle of uniformed policemen frightened would-be patrons and Jimmy had to close down until a new fence was built.

Jimmy's Place has been under fire almost incessantly since Wheatley took office last January and announced his policy of strict enforcement of gambling prohibitions.

The New 'March of Time' Is Going to Town!

'Metropolis—1939' to Show How City Clicks; Ruth Chatterton Coming to Olney Theater; News, Notes and Gossip of the Theater

HAVING PRETTY THOROUGHLY exhausted the twin topics of war scares in Europe and preparations for armed conflict between the Dictatorships and the Democracies, The March of Time at last seems to have turned its attention definitely to less ominous subjects.

It will be recalled that the last release of this splendidly executed documentary newsreel was dedicated to a recapitulation of the history of the motion picture. It unearthed some relics of the early days of the cinema that were genuine museum pieces and employed them to point the contrast between the old silent days and the present. That was both a nostalgic and a valuable gesture. There are still people among the rank and file of moviegoers who persist in their contention that pictures aren't as good as they used to be. If that is true, then telephones, automobiles and airplanes aren't as good as they used to be, either.

BELL

Now Time comes along with another issue that is completely divorced from the savage matter of human slaughter. It bears the title of "Metropolis—1939." That, one is led to believe, is merely another name for New York City. With Mr. Whalen's World's Fair going on over there, the first impression is that somewhere in the goings-on must lurk the crafty hand of the paid publicist. That, however, seems not to be the case.

Flash!

Ruth Chatterton, who began her theatrical career in Washington and then soared on to brilliant stardom on both stage and screen, will be the guest star at Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater the week of August 14. Miss Chatterton will be seen in a new play, "You Can't Eat the Goldfish," in which she has appeared with high success for several weeks in the New England summer theaters.

"Metropolis—1939," it is said, will reproduce no ordinary postcard scenes on the screen. It will, on the contrary, delve into aspects of life in Bagdad-on-the-Hudson that even a majority of its own residents do not know too much about. It will even go so far as to point out that a majority of the successful "New Yorkers," making $10,000 a year or over, are not New Yorkers at all, but interlopers from the Midwest, West and South.

In our book, New York always has been well down the list of favorite cities—except for a few surreptitious purposes. It will be interesting, when the new March of Time comes along to the RKO-Keith screen—as it will, eventually—to discover whether we've been crazy all these years or not. Crazier, I mean, than even you have suspected.

Word has leaked out, in envelopes from the Warner Brothers' publicity department, that Betty Grable, singing and dancing star of the screen, and Eddie "Rochester" Anderson, both recently seen with Jack Benny in "Man About Town" and both to be seen in person on the Earle stage all of next week, will arrive in Washington this morning. They will chug into the Union Station from Hollywood by train at 9:50 a. m. Their engagements at the Earle will, of course, begin tomorrow. To the best of my knowledge, this is Betty Grable's first visit to the Capitol since she and Jackie Coogan costarred on the stage at Loew's Capitol in a "Hollywood Revue" that conveyed a sketchy idea of what a motion picture studio might be like. Miss Grable has come along artistically a considerable distance since then. Maritally, Betty and Jackie—but let's not go into that.

It is a rather surprising discovery, but one that reflects high credit upon the National Capital, that there is no orphan girl in Washington between the ages of 10 and 14.

This has come to light through the efforts of the Washington Variety Club to select an orphan to be the guest of Linda Ware and Paramount Pictures on that "Cinderella Girl" trip to Hollywood, in celebration of the completion of Bing Crosby's "The Star Maker," in which Miss Ware, herself an orphan, appears. The Variety Club committee, comprised of Rudolph Berger, of Metro-Goldwyn-Myer; Sam Galanty, of Columbia Pictures; Eddie Fontaine, of Paramount, and J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the FBI, has made a systematic canvass of the local orphanages only to learn that there is no orphan girl in the Capital between the specified ages.

In this happy emergency appeal is made to the public to apprise the Variety Club, Willard Hotel, Washington, D. C., if any bona fide orphan girl between 10 and 14 is known, who might be eligible for a magic trip that will be remembered as the experience of a lifetime.

The belated revival engagement of "Of Human Bondage," costarring Bette Davis and Leslie Howard, will begin at the Little Theater on Saturday morning of this week. So great has been the demand for a return of this superlative picture that "Alexander Nevsky" is being withdrawn in its second week to make the earlier showing possible. Although it did not win her the award, it was Bette Davis' work in "Of Human Bondage" that made it a certainty that she would be the next Academy Award winner—which she was.

Susan Hayward, one of the more up-and-coming of the younger screen actresses, will be a brief visitor to Washington tomorrow. Miss Hayward is a flame-haired member of the "golden circle," a select group of young screensters of whom great things are expected. Her most recent appearance was with Bob Burns in Paramount's "Our Leading Citizen," not yet seen on a local screen. While here, Miss Hayward will be the guest of the Loew management and will be tendered a luncheon in the Variety Club, to which the starving Armenians of the drama desks graciously have been bidden.

Glamour Costarred in This One

ROBERT TAYLOR AND HEDY LAMARR causing romantic hearts to flutter in a scene from their first costarring vehicle under the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer banner. The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Aug. 2.

DRAMA DEPT.: Henri Bernstein, the French playwright, was lamenting the Broadway production of his play, "Promise" . . . In that play a chicken was devoured at each performance. A press-stunt was planned wherein, after the expected long run, the number of devoured chicks would be tabulated and an announcement made that, laid end to end, they'd stretch from here to Bernstein's home in Paris . . . "But the play flopped," Bernstein sighed, "and they stretched only as far as Cain's warehouse."

PERSONALS: Henry Miller, husband of Alice Duer Miller, believes that people are too sentimental when it comes to matters like funerals and tombstones—and that undertakers, etc., capitalize on that fact. He therefore went to a tombstone factory to purchase one for himself, selected one he liked, and was quoted an exorbitant figure . . . "But my dear sir," the salesman spieled, "think of the Dearly Departed" . . . "My good man," said Miller, "I'm the Dearly Departed."

POLICIES: Dudley Field Malone, who once announced that he was a candidate for the governorship of New York, again has political ambitions—this time for the mayoralty . . . "Have you heard?" the bald-headed Malone asked William K. Hamilton. "I've tossed my hat into the ring" . . . "You'd do better," Hamilton replied, studying Malone's pate, "to keep it on your head."

RADIO DEPT.: If present negotiations are consummated, practically every Broadway movie house will soon display a television set . . . which reminded Bobby Clark of the early days of radio, when he was appearing at the Palace Theater . . . One member of the troupe rushed off between shows to appear on a radio program—and this enraged E. F. Albee, who summoned George Godfrey, the Palace's booking-manager, and instructed: "I want you to put a clause in all my contracts, forbidding artists to work on the radio. I'll put those damn radio companies right out of business."

THEATER DEPT.: The RKO Theaters offered Bill Robinson a pass, and Robinson rejected it . . . "When I come into this theater," he explained, "I don't want to have to show a pass. I want to be recognized."

FINANCE DEPT.: Ernest Truex received offers to appear in London shows, and brought the proffered contracts to Herbert Marshall, for advice . . . "You're my friend," Marshall said, "but Ernest—you've been a star so much longer than I have. What do I know about these things that you don't know?" . . . "Oh, well," Truex replied, "You know . . . Pounds and things."

SOCIAL NOTES: Phil Barry and Robert Benchley organized the plans for increasing the membership, and each was assigned to recommending five names—which were duly recorded and then discussed . . . "I'll tell you what," Benchley proposed. "This Drop-Everything-Club is such a perfect club now—what do you say we drop it, and disband?" . . . A vote was held and the club, its perfection intact, was immediately disbanded.

MOVIES DEPT.: Edward G. Robinson, who sailed for England last week, wrote a friend here that he may decide to accept an offer in G. B.'s next picture . . . "Congratulations," the friend cabled, "at getting Shaw to write a picture for you" . . . "Wrong," Robinson cabled back. "By 'G. B.' I didn't mean Shaw. I meant Gaumont-British."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Aug. 2.—With Mack Sennett back in the picture arena, it's made us more conscious than ever of Keystone cops who got their training under his tutelage. Now we have another of his boys, Bill Seiter, who's done so many comedies, turning serious for "Allegheny Frontier," which dates back 16 years before the Revolutionary War. It stars Claire Trevor and John Wayne, who found themselves an overnight success in "Stage Coach." Looks as though RKO had themselves a new tandem.

HOPPER

Norman Taurog, who did "Boystown" and many other serious pictures, will throw the spotlight on Fred Astaire and Eleanor Powell's dancing feet for "Broadway Melody of 1940." And George Jeske, another comedy cop, furnished the gags for "The Day the Bookies Wept." He gave them the climax to the picture, a precious silly he'd stored up in his mind for years—a hiccuping horse with folded legs which had won the race. They were weeks finding a man to double a hiccup for the horse.

Lynn Hayes arranged to have a musical escort for his girl friend, Frances Robinson, when she came to the Grace Hayes Lodge. They were Nino Martini and John Carroll.

Selznick Studio made a valiant effort to bring their new Swedish star, Ingrid Bergeman and Garbo together without success. Then, all of a sudden, Garbo called Ingrid on the phone saying: "I had a letter from a mutual friend, who suggests we should know each other. How about it?"

A pat for William Dieterle, who's using a large number of extras eve day on "The Hunch Back." He insists on using boys and girls who haven't worked regularly lately.

Hymie Fink came to the rescue of Norma Shearer when he destroyed the pictures of her climbing over back of the seat at Helen Hayes opening. He didn't think they were dignified.

Little Frankie Thomas has a kleptomaniac on his hands. It's his pet bull pup, "Binge," who lives up to his name. The neighbors have complained about disappearing doormats, balls and even china swans from their fish pools. Frankie thinks he should rename him "Jesse James."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 2 (INS).—Jon Hall, whose flash-in-the-pan in "Hurricane," two years ago, has never been followed by another movie, was today signed by Edward Small to star in "South of Pago Pago," an $800,000 production. The irony of the whole thing is that Jon, who has been waiting around in idleness begging for a picture, left his bride, Frances Langford, in Fort Worth, where she has been making personal appearances, to hurry here to test for "Arizona."

LOUELLA PARSONS

When he reached Hollywood, he was told there was no necessity for his reporting at the Columbia Studios, for Sam Goldwyn had okayed the Small script with the starting date of September 1. Jon is hoping by some miracle he can do both the Wesley Ruggles Western and Small's South Sea epic. One thing, "South of Pago Pago" will be all right for the stalwart Hall lad, who lived in Tahiti for so long and who knows all the native customs.

George Raft's last-minute decision to sail on the Normandie today had all of his pals in Hollywood agog. There is no denying that his change of mind was influenced by the fact that Norma Shearer was on the same boat. Only last week he had canceled his passage and decided to go to Hot Springs before starting at Warners, but that was before he and Norma had such fun doing the World's Fair. He is due back the twenty-sixth, but no one will be surprised if he stays longer, for he made no bones of his admiration for Norma when he telephoned some of his friends. Norma was equally warm in her praise of George when she called a friend in Hollywood from the Normandie. Maybe it will be a shipboard romance, who knows? Certainly George's impulsive decision is unlike his usual methodical way of doing things. On the same boat are Charles Boyer, Pat Paterson, Frederick Lonsdale, Edward G. Robinson, Bebe Daniels, Ben Lyon and Harry Cohn. Can't you see the excitement when that ship docks in England.

I've always been a Franchot Tone fan, because he has never turned in a bad performance, even when his pictures, at times, have been dull. I told you when Franchot was in the hospital that he would make two pictures for Metro and my prophecy has come true. His second is "Willow Tree," a psychological drama not unlike "Night Must Fall," with Rosalind Russell, who costarred with Robert Montgomery in the last-mentioned melodrama. "Fast and Furious" and "The Willow Tree" are listed before Franchot keeps his stage date. "Night Must Fall" did a lot for Bob Montgomery in that it proved he needn't restrict himself to playing debonair men-about-town, but it was never popular entertainment.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Helen Wood and Harry Isaacs are reported headed altarward; the initials L.T.B. on a pin show plainly in a photograph taken of Lana Turner and Greg Bautzer at the Brown Derby. What's the answer? Charles Barnet, said by Walter Winchell to be Dorothy Lamour's chief heart interest, opens at the Palomar soon; Constance Bennett has joined the Douglas Fairbankses at the Lido, where the social season is in full sway; Bette Davis took her station wagon with her East and will remain as long as Warners give her permission; William Powell and all the gang on the "Thin Man" set today helped Myrna Loy celebrate her birthday. Both she and Bill are Leos, which probably makes them such congenial working partners; Tom Brown put Natalie Draper, his former wife, on the train when she left for New York and it won't surprise their young friends if he follows her and there is a reconciliation.

Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers are due back this month. She is still terribly hurt at her niece, Gwynn, who eloped with Bud Ernst without telling her of their plans. Bennie Goodman's band will get a big play from the younger generation when it opens at Victor Hugo's tomorrow night. Jackie Cooper is hosting a party. So is Mickey Rooney. Some of the older ones like to dance to Benny's numbers, too. Among them Joan Crawford, who is hostess at a dinner. Peggy Fears opens at the Cafe Lamaze August 8; the George Marshalls (Corinne Griffith) entertain with a small dinner Thursday night at the Beachcombers for Mrs. Jim Farley; Max Baer dancing with Mona Rica at the Troc and Mark Hellinger hosting a party for Mayor and Mrs. Kelly, of Chicago; the Jules Steins are building a house at Arrowhead Springs on the hotel grounds.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow.

Binge is a collector.

Every day Binge brings in a pair of shoes, a child's teddy bear or a pair of hosiery to add to his collection.

Every week-end, Frankie, who is too busy filming "The Dead End Kids in Military School" to perform the chore more often, places all souvenirs in a large basket. Then he makes the round of the neighborhood embarrassedly asking the neighbors to pick out the things that belong to them.

By Frankie's side and not sharing his discomfiture trots Binge, who seems to think it silly to return the things he has worked so hard collecting. Next day he starts all over again because he's a collector at heart and there's nothing Frankie can do about it.

"UNEXPECTED FATHER." Baby Sandy, who made so pronounced a hit in "East Side of Heaven," appears at the Earle in his second film with a company headed by Mischa Auer, Shirley Ross, Dennis O'Keefe and Joy Hodges. In the story, Sandy causes no end of trouble for the other players. A trio of headliners is promised for the Earle stage, with "Rochester," Jack Benny's radio and screen valet; Betty Grable, screen song and dance star, and Frank Masters' Bell-Tone Orchestra. Others on the Earle stage are Marion Frances, the Masters' Voices, Jay Mathews and Buss Dillon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Palace

"ANDY HARDY GETS SPRING FEVER." This latest adventure of the energentic Master Hardy continues, revealing him, among other things, as a boy in love with his teacher, a role played by an attractive screen debutante, Helen Gilbert. Meanwhile, Mitzi Green continues her engagement in "It's a Wise Child," through this Saturday evening. Matinees this afternoon and Saturday at 2:45 o'clock.

Trans-Lux

Divine Eyes 3 of Society's Green Pastures

Harlem 'God' Said to Have $15,000,000 to Buy New 'Heavens'

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 2.—Father Divine, bald-pated little Harlem cult leader, whose myriad dusky "angels" call him "God," tonight had a reported $15,000,000 land-buying fund and planned further invasion of the Social Register's "green pastures" in Philadelphia, exclusive Newport, R. I., and Chester, N. Y.

With an "extension heaven" already established amid a rolling 500-acre estate at Krum Elbow, directly across the Hudson River from President Roosevelt's Hyde Park estate, the 5-foot evangelist disclosed these projected purchases:

The 2,500-acre estate of Robert W. Goelet, New York banker, including a 52-room mansion, in the Glenmere Lake village of Chester, close by harness-racing Goshen.

Properties on exclusive Chestnut Hill in Philadelphia.

Angels to Newport

Father Divine's white secretary, John Lamb, said the self-styled messiah had conferred with Mrs. Angela Kaufman, the present owner of "The Castle," to arrange details for taking over the Newport manor as soon as possible.

Lamb said Divine would probably take "a couple of thousand" angels on a steamboat excursion to open the Newport "heaven," whose neighbors would include just about the whole summer edition of the Social Register.

Lamb countered with the cult's eternal cry of "peace!" to question about where the reported $15,000,000 land-buying fund came from.

Recent Acquisitions

Recent acquisitions, in addition to about 22 Manhattan "heavens" and 50 rural "heavens" up-State, include:

A 16-room mansion in the fashionable Park Hill section of Yonkers, N. Y., purchased for $25,000 last May;

A 50-room "private retreat" on upper Madison avenue, where Divine makes his headquarters with 12 secretaries and a private telephone system equipped with loud-speaker extensions through the house, purchased for $24,500;

And a 3-story residence in the exclusive Sutton Manor section of New Rochelle, N. Y., built originally at a cost of $50,000, purchased last June.

SEC to Probe Nazi Bond Issue in U. S.

United States during the next four years.

German corporations, cities and other political units owe interest payments to holders of their securities in the United States. Under German law, no cash may be sent out of the Reich to meet such obligations. The units which owe the interest pay the funds to the German "conversion office" and the latter, in turn, had proposed to offer American bondholders 50-year 3 per cent bonds instead of actual cash.

An SEC official said the commission had informed the State Department of its intended action. The State Department, he said, told the commission that "no critical implications were to be drawn from the standpoint of foreign policy."

In a statement, the German Embassy said the demands for information were such that "no sovereign government" could submit to them.

"Benefit of American Creditors"

The proposed bond issue, it said, was "for the exclusive benefit of American creditors" and not to raise new money in this country for Germans.

It was further pointed out that the German government had "voluntarily" guaranteed the bonds, "notwithstanding the fact that the original obligation to the American creditors carried no such guarantee."

"As is well known to the commission," the German statement said, dollar exchange "cannot be obtained from trade between Germany and the United States, inasmuch as it showed a balance highly unfavorable to Germany. Such exchange must, therefore, be obtained from trade with other countries."

The statement said the request for additional information lacked justification.

At the Treasury, it was made known that a preliminary investigation indicated a necessity for action to remedy injury done "to the domestic wood pulp industry by reason of the importation of foreign wood pulp at low prices."

If further investigation reveals that pulp is being sold here at "dumping" prices, a compensating tariff can be imposed on the product, which is now ordinarily duty-free.

Bill Reported Favorably to Help Americas Arm

By International News Service

Favorably reporting a bill to have the Army and Navy assist Latin-American nations in acquiring war ships and their equipment in the United States, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday launched a drive for passage before Congress adjourns.

"It is my earnest hope that this bill will become law before Congress adjourns," Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles told the committee yesterday morning. Welles brought the committee letters from every Latin-American nation excepting Mexico, declaring approval. He said he had received approval orally from Mexico's Ambassador.

An amendment was adopted by the committee to provide that orders from Latin America shall not delay construction in Government yards for the United States.

Hawaiian Paper Says Japanese There Are Loyal

Honolulu, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Star Bulletin said in an editorial today it was "unwarranted presumption for the Osaka Mainichi (Japanese newspaper) to attempt to disavow the loyalty to the United States of America citizens of Japanese ancestry in Hawaii, the impertinence of which should not go unchallenged."

The Japanese newspaper asserted the United States forfeited the loyalty of more than 100,000 American citizens of Japanese ancestry residing in Hawaii by terminating the 1911 trade treaty with Japan.

Exception to the newspaper's assertion was made yesterday by a group of Hawaiian citizens of Japanese ancestry. Wilfred Tsukiyama, city and county attorney, said "the people of Japan have no right to speak for us."

Retirement Act Changes

The Civil Service Commission has repeatedly recommended a reduction in the optional retirement age of Civil Service employes, with the proviso that such option may be exercised by the Government as well as by the employe.

Such a change, providing for a more flexible retirement system, would be an added protection to Government employes and would greatly improve the efficiency of the service. Individuals prematurely aged, or suffering from physical and other disabilities, would be encouraged to retire on pension before the date of compulsory retirement. Incompetents unwilling to withdraw from the service could be weeded out more readily if adequate pension provision had been made for them.

It is, therefore, cause for deep regret that the Neely-Ramspeck bill, designed to reduce optional retirement ages for pensionable employes, was shorn of these liberalizing proposals in conference. As finally approved by House and Senate, its amendments to the Civil Service retirement act, while desirable, are of comparatively minor importance.

The emasculation which took place is attributed to disagreement over the rate of contribution to be exacted from Government employes as an offset to increased costs of the liberalized retirement plan. The Senate bill called for a 4 per cent deduction from employes' salaries—an increase of one-half of 1 per cent over the existing rate. The House bill carried a 5 per cent rate, but it was understood that the House conferees would have accepted 4½ per cent. Strong objections from representatives of some employe groups to the requisite increase are said to be responsible for the decision of the conferees to drop the controversial sections.

Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, regards this opposition to increased contributions as "short-sighted," in view of the substantial benefits that would have been granted in return. Yet there is much to be said in defense of the Government employe groups who protested against an assessment of 4½ per cent. Many of them in the low-salary groups have a struggle to make both ends meet. Moreover, to the younger employes the benefits of the pension system seem remote, while the sacrifices are immediate and very real.

Chairman Bulow of the Senate Civil Service Committee is considering a plan for graduated rates of contribution to the retirement fund, leaving the percentage payments that might be exacted from the lowest salaried groups unchanged. If the rates were carefully adjusted so as not to exact too much from employes in the upper groups, this proposal might provide a solution of present difficulties. A long overdue reform, which would benefit both the Government and its employes, certainly should not be indefinitely delayed by disagreement over the rate of contribution to be levied.

Excellent Appointment

In naming Dr. Henry F. Grady as Assistant Secretary of State to replace Francis B. Sayre, recently appointed High Commissioner to the Philippines, President Roosevelt has made a wholly logical appointment.

Dr. Grady is exceptionally well qualified for his new post, which will place him in direct charge of reciprocal trade agreements policy. His interest and experience in matters involving American foreign trade is of many years' standing. He has seen service in the field as trade commissioner and commercial attache. He was for a time head of the research division of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and during the early years of the present Administration was chief of the trade agreements division of the Department of State. For nine years professor of international trade and dean of the College of Commerce of the University of California, Dr. Grady has, since 1937, been vice chairman of the Tariff Commission.

Few policies of the Roosevelt Administration have won more thoughtful support than the carefully managed trade agreements program. In this constructive endeavor Dr. Grady has throughout played a very important role. His new post will increase the sphere of his usefullness and permit him to devote his energy, tact and keen intelligence to the important task of clearing the channels of international trade.

The President Signs

It could not have been easy for President Roosevelt to attach his signature to the Hatch bill. The action would not have been easy for any President since, under our system of government, the Chief Executive is also the directing head of the dominant political party and as such stands to lose by any curbing of political activities. The more credit to Mr. Roosevelt, therefore, that in the test, and obviously not without a struggle, he showed himself statesman first and politician second.

The Hatch bill, now happily enacted into law, seems destined to prove an event of vital importance in American history. It will certainly greatly decrease, if it does not wholly eliminate, the most vicious aspects of the spoils system. It will enhance the status of Government employes and protect them from petty blackmail exacted for political purposes. It will safeguard those on relief from a particularly disgusting form of pressure. It will check the trend toward coercion which accompanies the spread of even an enlightened bureaucracy. It will render favoritism less likely, graft less profitable, official tyranny much harder to impose.

And this is not the whole story. By making it unlawful for Federal employes to play politics the Hatch law also makes extension and improvement of the civil service far easier. The incentive for political appointments is greatly curtailed by making it illegal for the appointee to return political service for favors rendered. A taint of degradation is now removed from the attraction to Government service. That means the higher type of applicant will have more interest as well as more chance, and that means better government.

Good government is, after all, a matter of efficient administration rather than of enlightened legislation. The best laws will fail in operation if those who apply them are second-rate, and second-rate the administrative arm will be if politics dictates its personnel. Fortunately this is recognized with increasing clarity by the average Congressman, to whom patronage problems have become far more of a nightmare than a political asset.

With the taproots of patronage cut, by banning political activities for all but policy-making officials, extension of the civil service to all branches of the Federal Government will be much easier. And with that extension can be expected the improvement in civil service standards and procedures which is clearly desirable. To date, under a patronage system, the civil service has always been a stepchild, and has shown the natural consequences of that invidious position. Now there is real opportunity for the ugly duckling to develop.

The time for such development is overdue. For of all the anomalies in the New Deal none has been more pronounced than its modernistic extension of governmental functions on an old-fashioned spoils-system basis. The latter could be resentfully tolerated so long as the sphere of government remained relatively unimportant. But with the rapid expansion of Federal authority into new and highly technical fields a highly professionalized, wholly nonpolitical, civil service has become imperative.

Toward the achievement of this goal the act "to prevent pernicious political activities" is the first substantial step. The President does well to point out that it is no more of an infringement on individual liberty than are the present civil service regulations. He also makes an excellent point in saying that the objectives of the act should also be the goal of State and local governments.

But is seems unfortunate that Mr. Roosevelt did not find room, in yesterday's message to Congress, to emphasize the great promise for better government of the legislation which he has just approved. His reference to the fact that the bill excludes the legislative branch of government from its operation is also mystifying. Of course it does. The object of the Hatch bill was not to eliminate politics in the legislative arm, where it is necessary for democracy. The idea was to keep politics out of the administrative arm, where it decidedly does not belong.

It is only in the totalitarian states that the administrators are all politicians, while in their so-called legislatures politics is suppressed.

A Long-Range Program

With a vote on the housing bill probable, it is to be hoped that the House will consider that measure solely on its individual merits.

By an unfortunate tactical blunder the bill to extend the borrowing and lending powers of the USHA has come to be associated in the public mind, and in the minds of a good many Congressmen, with the Administration's latest pump-priming effort. Defeat of the spending-lending bill is not, however, an argument in favor of shelving housing legislation. For the latter is part of a long-range program, not an emergency device for stimulating business. Moreover, it is not a partisan measure, for it has been indorsed by Republicans as well as Democrats interested in the elimination of disgraceful slum conditions.

While there are some features of the housing policy to which The Post has raised objections—notably the excessively large subsidies paid by the USHA—that is no reason for threatening disaster to a work of such great social and economic importance as that of slum clearance. Policies could be reformed and economies could be effected without depriving the USHA of the funds essential to carry forward its vital program.

The Croatian Issue

Wedged between Italy and Germany, Yugoslavia's external position is nothing to boast about. While the sympathies of her people remain to a considerable extent with the western democracies, the pressure of necessity has compelled the Belgrade government to court the axis powers.

But if Yugoslavia's external situation is far from happy, her internal situation is, if anything, worse. Since its creation 20 years ago, as a result of the amalgamation of Serbia, Montenegro and large portions of the Hapsburg empire, the kingdom has been torn by inner strife. The Croats have resented the dominant position assumed by the Serbs. The Serbs, for their part, have refused to submit to Croatian autonomy demands from fear of weakening a nation which has made the common mistake of thinking that a strongly centralized government is a strong government.

Last spring, however, the Belgrade authorities agreed to cut the Gordian knot of Serb-Croat rivalry by transforming Yugoslavia from a unitary to a federal state. But this plan has not yet been carried out, with the result that the bitterness of the Croats has steadily increased. So much so, in fact, that Dr. Vladko Matchek, the Croatian leader, has now seen fit to threaten the secession of Croatia from Yugoslavia even if that resulted in the establishment of a German protectorate over the Croats.

Tea is seldom drunk as hot as it is brewed and it is doubtful if Dr. Matchek and his fellow Croats are prepared to carry out their very reckless threat. The fate of Bohemia, Moravia and Slovakia is not a pleasant alternative to remaining in the kingdom, even under existing circumstances. That is why it is possible to suspect that Dr. Matchek is raising the independence cry in order to prod Belgrade into belated action on the autonomy issue.

Light Without Heat

The commandment "Let There Be Light!" has often been hopefully modified to express the wish for more light with less heat. And in the field of physical science man is achieving this seemingly impossible desideratum through a succession of inventions, each more wonderful than the last, and all aimed at his greater comfort and benefit.

Television, itself a new development, has called into use a mercury lamp radiating more than twice as much light as an incandescent lamp of the same voltage, yet giving off no appreciable heat. What this means to the broadcasting studios will be quickly realized by all performers who have suffered from their torrid temperatures.

Another development, even more recent, in the direction of light without heat is the new operating-table lighting unit installed at the Caledonian Hospital in Brooklyn. This novel fluorescent lighting, successfully demonstrated at the New York World's Fair, has now been put to use for the first time in surgical operations where the proper lighting and absence of heat are essential to the best results.

In this mercury-lighting unit, which eliminates glare entirely through the application of a reflector of minute panoramic mirrors, a maximum of evenly distributed light is concentrated on the working plane. The heat emitted is practically nil.

In addition, by the employment of a 4-to-1 combination of daylight and white tubes, the proper color valuation is effected—another considerable aid to the doctor to whom the ability to work in depth, at ease, is of the first importance. As the chief surgeon at the Caledonian Hospital put it, "The doctor now feels relaxed where, under incandescent lighting with its concomitant heat, he felt tense."

There would be far less devastating strain and tension, more relaxation leading to real progress, if science would also teach us to develop light without heat in the field of social relationships.

A cat may look at a king, but he'd better not catch himself staring at a dictator.

Slippery Schlemmiel

From the London Daily Telegraph, reprinted from Living Age.

I hear that in the complex process of passing "The Women" as fit for public consumption the Lord Chamberlain's office was considerably harassed by Miss Clare Booth's rich mastery of the byways of New York slang.

At one point in the text a character refers to another (a man, of course) as a "schlemmiel"—an expression which is, I gather, good Yiddish for "damned fool." The Lord Chamberlain's office gave it all up as a bad job and returned the copy of the play with the word underlined. In the margin was the despairing comment: "This eludes me."

The Weak Link

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is really a tragic thing that is happening right now in regard to WPA, with many thousands of none too well nourished, underprivileged people not knowing where they are going to turn for decent means of support. In many ways their plight is America's plight, too. A chain is no stronger than its weakest link. The ten or more millions of unemployed today are a weak link in the pattern of democratic society. What happens to these unemployed—these unemployed for whom industry is unable to provide jobs, and who must depend on the whims of political fortunes for relief jobs—will very seriously affect the future of this Nation. This country has a Constitution which guarantees "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" for all the people. How can people have those essentials in a so-called free, democratic society if they cannot find jobs in private industry and if the Government, whose duty it is to protect them, thins them away from their jobs? Then, too, whose Government is it? Isn't it supposed to be the Government "of the people, by the people and for the people?" How can it be for the unemployed if they are thinned out of a chance to make a decent living?

There is another side of the unemployment problem, Mr. Editor, which is also a very serious matter: the problem of keeping employed those workers who have jobs in private industry. The consuming power of the unemployed is needed in order to keep this industrial society, from farm to manufacturing plant, going. It is perfectly clear to me that if you thin out the ranks of the WPA you are going to thin out the purchasing power of the entire population. You destroy jobs of those still employed in private industry and you create a spiral, a dangerous curve of increased unemployment which may put too great a strain on the already weak link—unemployment—in this society.

Strike Agitations

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The average workman cannot be interested in all of this strike agitation, but he is getting more and more under the influence of these union racketeers—so-called leaders.

If we could send these agitators back to the countries they left we could settle our problems amicably.

The Antialien Bill

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I notice that another of the so-called antialien bills has passed the House of Representatives and is now in the hands of the Senate.

I am referring to the bill sponsored by Representative Smith, of Virginia. It is indeed unfortunate. This bill is the most drastic of the 100 antialien bills. It carries a long list of restrictions on aliens. It is very vague and can be twisted in almost any fashion to suit any purpose. It can also be used against native-born citizens. This bill smells strongly of fascism. One portion of the bill provides for the deportation of aliens who teach, talk, or write on the overthrow of the Government by force, advocate illegal destruction of property or who have served sentences for crimes involving moral turpitude.

First of all, who are aliens? What may be an alien to one person is a citizen to another. In the second place, what constitutes overthrow of the Government? What might be overthrow of the Government to some people might be perfectly American and democratic to others, such as magazines, talks, etc. What is destruction of property?

These bills, I repeat, are vague, and can be slightly turned around to set up a Fascist form of government in this country. In other words, all that the patriots and martyrs of this country since its founding 150 years ago fought and sacrificed for would have been in vain if the Smith bill and others of this type are allowed to become a law.

A CITIZEN.
Washington, July 31.

A National Incorporation Law

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As highly commendable as it has been to spend to relieve unemployment, spending will not restore prosperity. We can spend and lend as much as we please but that will not make the economic machine "click" back into action. We cannot prime the pump, as commendable as that effort has been. It has not been a psychology of false fear but of reasonable and sound fear that caused the depression and that has continued it. We have not gone into the causes of the depression nor made the proper effort to cure them.

In 1929 the public lost confidence in the old order of corporate securities and let them go. The securities market was loaded with water—fiction. Under the wildest kind of incorporation laws (the scandal of the world), we thought it was all right to issue unlimited quantities of watered stock. The public lost confidence not only in corporate securities but also in the willingness and ability of the Government to regulate corporations. The good securities lost favor with the bad. Since 1929 the public has refused to invest in new securities; its losses have been too stupendous.

What is needed is legislation, a national incorporation law to provide honest securities and, as far as possible, honest management, to give the public confidence in future securities. Then the people will fall over themselves to invest in the new issues and we will have an end of the depression. But the reform measures must be thorough-going—sufficient to inspire unstinted confidence in the investing public.

Give a national incorporation law, full of teeth, and the public will let the old issues go and take to the new with a vengeance. We will have a new expansion of industry and a vast, and sufficient, re-employment.

The idea of sufficiently stringent incorporation and corporation laws must appeal to all patriotic classes, if such laws have promise of removing the curse of this depression. Something may have to be done about the mortgage debts also. But these, remaining undisturbed, can better be paid with a revival of investment. In January, 1935, Mr. James Warburg issued an itemized statement of the mortgages of all kinds extant in the United States and they amounted to $281,000,000,000—on farms, homes, industry; national, State, county, municipal bonds, etc.

Our total wealth is only about 365 billions. We are broke. Collateral is exhausted. That is the chief reason the banks have not lent for ten years—there has been nothing to lend on—what with the decline in prices. Something will have to be done about the debts: they can never be paid.

Mortgages are choking the country to death; the interest can hardly be paid, and all of the principal, never. It is often best to throw overboard all the freight to save the lives of the passengers. It will pay creditors in the long run to write down the mortgages—even to 50 per cent if necessary—to restore the country.

HUGH C. MIDDLETON.

Respect for Treaties

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is more hope for the conscience of nations since Secretary Hull announced to Japan that the United States would, at the end of the six months period, abrogate its treaty with her.

At a time when clauses in treaties mean nothing and the treaties themselves mean less; when nations of ill-will forget all protocols and covenants and relegate them to waste baskets as quickly as they loosen bombs upon unsuspecting cities, it is significant that Cordell Hull lives up to the letter of our treaty with Japan and gives six months notice that we desire a change in relations. It is also significant that, when the diplomats of Europe bow before the bluster and braggadocio of the axis powers, the United States stands firm and refuses to abandon the cause of democracy wherever it is threatened; will lend its weight against aggression and fascism, and will do it legally and without violating any precepts of international law.

Therein lies the ultimate strength of a nation—in the ability to maintain its position in the world and its respect among the world's peoples.

MORTON J. JACOBS.

The Alien Bills

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Last week you printed in your letter column a communication from the executive secretary of the Men's Trade Union League, replying to a letter of mine, which you previously published, in regard to the antialien bills.

I should like to know if you are acquainted with this organization, the Men's Trade Union League? I have never heard of it elsewhere, and I have inquired extensively about it.

Furthermore, Mr. Rau errs in several respects. He states that the American Federation of Labor supports the anti-alien bills, as if the whole body of the A. F. of L. were solidly behind them. Some A. F. of L. unions, because of their fear of competition from alien labor, have unfortunately indorsed these bills, but many far-sighted A. F. of L. leaders, seeing the threat to their own people contained in the bills, have openly denounced them.

Mr. Rau also lightly tossed aside any objection to the registering of aliens, by saying married persons and voters are registered; the President is fingerprinted; so why not aliens? But the President is not going to be asked to show his fingerprints at every turn. When a man and a woman walk down the street together, they are not asked to show a card to prove they are married.

If aliens were required to register, the only way to check on them would be to stop not aliens but every citizen at various times for proofs as to their citizenship status. The law would defeat its own end, moreover, for the very aliens the law intends to keep under control, the undesirable aliens, would be the ones who would seek to evade the regulation and would not register.

Finally, Mr. Rau must have a very vivid imagination about the numbers of aliens who come to this country with intent to destroy its Government. Aliens come here primarily, and this has been something to make America proud, because they believe that here they can find freedom, dignity and security.

On Being A House Guest

I DO NOT visit well or fluently. I am allergic to being a house guest. If there were some place in the Bible that threatened one with an eternity of house-guesting if he erred from the straight and narrow, I'd live a blameless life from now on. The only way I could ever stand it would be to visit one of those Long Island or Newport or Saratoga homes where everybody so quickly becomes and so faithfully remains jingled that nobody but the servants know who is the host, so the guests don't know whom to hate. My allergy to the owld potheen making that plan infeasible, it is me for home or a hospital or the hotel during the rest of my earthly fooling around.

One of the features of house-guest that I rebel against is the fact that you almost have to sign a contract to remain good-natured and smiling "for the duration." Not that I mind being good-natured and smiling for quite a spell. I try to be that way most of the time. But to feel the obligation to do so and to realize that if I ever should let go and yield to an impulse to indulge in a few minutes of peevish sincerity, I'd be labeled "crab" for the rest of my life. This is too much of a strain. One can do this crabbing act at home or in a hotel and his reputation will at least remain static. If ever again, "in the fell clutch of circumstance," I am hazed into a social cul de sac from which I cannot emerge honorably without becoming a house guest, I am going to rig up a mask, paint a smile on it, and wear it until the guest sentence is served out or commuted.

The towel rite—you are told which towels are yours, when the host shows you that citadel of trouble, that focal point of terror, the bathroom—that is something I don't feel as if I should be called upon to go through any more. Usually the towels are of the finest material, embroidered and all that. They look too sacred to be touched by the ordinary human hand or face. Without rubber gloves on I wouldn't even handle them. They make you feel like walking by them with bared head and folded hands and murmuring, "How natural he looks."

I wouldn't wipe my face or hands on one of those any more than I would think of using the Taj Mahal for a cowshed or Old Glory for a floor mop. Invariably I look around till I find a Turkish towel that looks as if the children had wiped on it after making mud pies, and use that. Or I merely stand and look, goggle-eyed, at those holy vestments till my hands drain dry. Now the discussion has been painful so far, but it becomes more so from here on. I have touched briefly and inadequately on the agony of being a welcome and sincerely invited guest.

My next reference is to something so excruciating it ought to be almost illegal to mention it among people with ordinary sensibilities and average capacity for sympathetic suffering. I refer to the experience of being a guest who was invited and went, and immediately found he had not really been wanted; that the invitation had been a bluff, a phony, a show-off stunt, and never meant to be accepted.

Two or three times in my life I have been innocently subjected to that inquisitorial ordeal. Not knowing that anybody ever invited anybody without meaning it (I never had, and my folks never had), I took an invitation, when given with apparent cordiality, to mean just what it said. I accepted and moved in (that was before the inception of my allergy for visiting, and probably had a lot to do with said inception), and then the sad news burst clearly upon me. Mine and I were as welcome as poison ivy in a nursery. It took two or three days for the whole bitter truth to soak in. At first it seemed impossible to accept the cold facts at their face value. But there they were!

Once again, before I was entirely cured of the visiting habit, I stumbled into such a mess. This time the hostess had wired us two days before not to come, because of the plumbing, and we hadn't got the wire. I have never since been able to look those folks in the face. The depth of the humiliation made it as bad as a stinging conscience.

And on one other occasion of which I have not the courage to speak except briefly—nay, almost curtly—I presumed on a welcome that had not been extended! That was the crowning spot of shame in a human life that carries a peak load of embarrassing memories. I had taken it for granted that the other guy liked me as well as I liked him.

So I do not want to visit. I will not visit. I love to feed a friend salt and to partake of his. But as for roosting in his rooms, participating in the dawn battle for aquatic sports and bathroom privileges, undergoing minute inspection by his perfectly grand children and his wife who always did wonder what the poor goof saw in me, I earnestly ask to be excused—nay, I viciously insist on being excused. I will do almost anything for a friend except be his house guest. Let him get somebody who is less sensitive and who has been less deeply scarred by private hospitality.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN.

Trick Federal Laws

THE FEDERAL Government's intervention in the Kansas City and New Orleans corruption jobs may be approved only with reservations and regrets, because it must be observed that the thieves are snared by trick Federal laws and that the State governments, which have the real duty of prosecuting them, don't. In Louisiana, it is true, the State has obtained some indictments, and it may be that there is a serious intention to go down the line with them, but that is hard to believe.

The State government itself, through important members of its personnel, has been an accessory to their crimes, and there is reason to suspect that these actions against individuals who were powerful in State politics are intended only to beat the Federals to the punch. The State government is so corrupt that it cannot be trusted to do a thorough job. Evidence can disappear, witnesses can forget, go away or change their stories under threats of reprisal through taxes or even blackjacks and, of course, the Louisiana courts are no better than the machine of which they are a part, which is just awful.

Income Tax Law Not Punitory

THAT ALMOST PUTS it up to the Federal Government, as receiver, to prosecute these people under any laws which can be stretched or twisted to cover their crimes. But that kind of doing doesn't increase the popular respect for law or for the Federal Government.

The income tax law was intended to serve a stated purpose, but it wasn't intended to punish men for grafting or embezzlement. There are State laws for that purpose, but in Missouri the State government passed up its responsibility and the Federals went in and got Tom Pendergast for failure to schedule money which he had stolen. In a fine sense he actually was punished for violation of the income tax laws, but everybody knows that he, like Al Capone, was guilty of worse crimes which were the State's own business and that the State of Missouri, like the State of Illinois, was content to let the Department of Justice do a task which was properly local. The offenses against Federal law were relatively minor.

In Louisiana, technically, certain defendants may have been guilty of using the mails to defraud, but the fraud itself, rather than the incidental use of the mails in one small detail of the transaction, was the important offense.

Federal Inquiry On Secretive Basis

THE PUBLIC ISN'T allowed to know much about the proceedings in the Federal investigation in Louisiana just now, and it must be hoped that those Federal authorities who are themselves members of a political group with interests at stake, have noble motives for the imposition of a censorship. Tom Stokes writes vaguely from Louisiana about the Government's success in rounding up political ringsters and of stories of abject confessions pouring from witnesses, but, although I have been reading all the copy out of there, I don't know what he is talking about. It sounds like those stories from Russia, and perhaps Americans will have to smuggle in English or Canadian papers, published outside the jurisdiction of the American Federal courts, to learn what goes on in Louisiana.

If the States—and this makes three of them to now, Missouri, Illinois, and Louisiana—are too corrupt or flabby to apply their own laws to crime in their local affairs, that not only means that they are fixing to toss back their charters and lean their gross, helpless weight on the Federal Government, but that they are willing to stand for anything up to and including murder for long periods until the Government can rig up a technical case of illegal parking by a Federal letter box to catch a man who has been violating every law on the books. It means that they are morally bankrupt and want to become wards of a Federal Government which, after all, has its weak and human moments itself.

State Government 'Abolition Considered

THERE ARE SOME who strongly believe that the States are too expensive and that they have ducked their responsibilities in so many phases that they ought to be abolished and replaced by fewer, bigger and better units. That is a proposition to be argued, but if it is to be done at all it should be done in a forthright way as a considered and deliberate step, not by decline into such a condition of helplessness and corruption that they have to call in the National Government as cop, guardian and scavenger.

In Chicago, Kansas City and Louisiana there was not a single offense that was not covered by a State law. But Capone and Pendergast weren't even charged with littering the sidewalk in the State courts, and in Louisiana the State authorities didn't twitch a finger until newspaper exposes forced the Federals to move in.

President's Text On Hatch Bill

Suggests Extension of Curb of U.S. Workers' Political Activity

The text of President Roosevelt's message on the Hatch bill follows:

To the Congress of the United States:

Because there have been so many misrepresentations, some unpremeditated, some deliberate, in regard to the attitude of the executive branch of the Government in relation to Senate bill 1871, "An act to prevent pernicious political activities," and because a number of questions have been raised as to the meaning and application of some of its provisions, I deem it advisable at the time of executive approval to make certain observations to the Congress of the United States.

The genesis of this legislation lies in the message of the President of January 5, 1939, respecting an additional appropriation for the Works Progress Administration. I said in that message: "It is my belief that improper political practices can be eliminated only by the imposition of rigid statutory regulations and penalties by the Congress, and that this should be done. Such penalties should be imposed not only upon persons within the administrative organization of the Works Progress Administration, but also upon outsiders who have in fact in many instances been the principal offenders in this regard. My only reservation in this matter is that no legislation should be enacted which will in any way deprive workers on the Works Progress Administration program of the civil rights to which they are entitled in common with other citizens.

Originated in Congress Itself

Furthermore, in applying to all employes of the Federal Government (with a few exceptions) the rules to which the civil service employes have been subject for many years, this measure is in harmony with the policy that I have consistently advocated during all my public life, namely, the wider extension of civil service as opposed to its curtailment.

It is worth noting that nearly all exemptions from the civil service, which have been made during the last six years and a half, have originated in the Congress itself and not in the Executive.

Furthermore, it is well known that I have consistently advocated the objectives of the present bill. It has been currently suggested that partisan political reasons have entered largely into the passage of the bill: But with this I am not concerned, because it is my hope that if properly administered the measure can be made an effective instrument of good Government.

As is usual with all bills passed by the Congress, this bill has been examined, on its receipt at the Executive offices, by the appropriate departments or agencies, in this case the Attorney General of the United States and the Civil Service Commission.

The attorney general has advised me that it seems clear that the Federal Government has the power to prescribe as qualifications for its employes that they refrain from taking part in other endeavors which, in the light of common experience, may well consume time and attention required by their duties as public officials. He points out, however, that such qualifications cannot properly preclude Government employes from the exercise of the right of free speech or from their right to exercise their franchise.

Will Serve Purpose Intended

The question of constitutionality being resolved in favor of the bill, our next inquiry relates to the exercise and preservation of these rights. It is obvious that the intent of the bill is to follow broadly the provisions of civil service regulations that have existed for many years in regard to political activities of Federal employes.

It is because I have received and will continue to receive so many queries asking what a Government employe may or may not do that it seems appropriate at the outset to postulate the broad principle that if the bill is administered in accord with its spirit, and if it is in the future administered without abuse, oppression or groundless fear, it will serve the purpose intended by the Congress.

For example, I have been asked by employes of the Government whether under this law they would lose their positions if they merely attended political meetings. The answer is, of course, no.

I have been asked whether they would lose their positions if they contributed voluntarily to party or individual campaign funds without being solicited. The answer is, of course, no.

I have been asked whether they would lose their positions if they should merely express their opinion or preference publicly—orally, by radio, or in writing—without doing so as part of an organized political campaign. The answer is no.

I have been asked if citizens who have received loans from the Home Owners Loan Corporation, from the Farm Credit Administration or its subsidiaries, from the Farm Security Administration, from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and other Government lending agencies would be subject to the terms of this bill. The answer is no.

Similar Questions Raised

I have been asked whether farmers receiving farm benefits would be bound by the terms of the bill. Again the answer is no.

I have been asked if Government employes who belong to Young Republican clubs, Young Democratic clubs, Civil Service Reform associations, the League of Women Voters, the American Federation of Labor, the Congress of Industrial Organizations and similar bodies are subject to the penalties of the measure because of mere membership in these organizations. The answer is no.

There will be hundreds of similar questions raised in the actual administration and enforcement of this bill. Such questions will be asked in most cases by individuals in good faith. And it is only fair that they should receive an answer. I am, therefore, asking the Attorney General to take the necessary steps through the new civil-liberties unit of the Department of Justice in order that the civil rights of every Government employe may be duly protected and that the element of fear may be removed.

I have been asked if the bill applies to veterans—Civil War, Indian wars, the war with Spain, the World War—retired officers and men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps who, though not Government employes, are receiving benefits or pensions of one kind or another. The answer is, of course, no.

I have been asked if the act applies to those who get Government benefits under the social security act in the form of old-age pensions or in the form of unemployment compensation. The answer is no.

Finally, I have been asked various questions relating to the right of a Government employe publicly to answer unwarranted attacks made on him or on his work or the work of his superiors, or on the work of his subordinates, notwithstanding the fact that such attacks or misrepresentations were made political purposes by newspapers or by individuals as a part of a political campaign.

Excludes Congressional Workers

This raises the interesting question as to whether all Government officials except the President and Vice President, persons in the office of the President, heads and assistant heads of executive departments and policy determining officers appointed by and with the advice and consent of the Senate must remain mute if and when they or the work with which they are concerned is attacked and misrepresented in a political campaign or preliminary thereto.

It will be noted that the language of the bill wholly excludes members or employes of the legislative branch of the Government from its operation.

It can hardly be maintained that it is an American way of doing things to allow newspapers, magazines, radio broadcasters, members and employes of the Senate and House of Representatives and all kinds of candidates for public office and their friends to make any form of charge, misrepresentation, falsification or vituperation against the acts of any individual or group of individuals employed in the executive branch of the Federal Government with complete immunity against reply except by a handful of high executive officials. That, I repeat, would be un-American, because it would be unfair, and the great mass of Americans like fair play and insist on it. They do not stand for any gag act.

It is, therefore, my considered opinion, in which the Attorney General of the United States joins me, that all Federal employes, from the highest to the lowest, have the right publicly to answer any attack or misrepresentation, provided, of course, they do not make such reply as part of active participation in political campaigns.

The same definition of fair and proper administration of the bill applies to the right of any Government employe, from the highest to the lowest, to give to the public factional information relating to the conduct of Government affairs. To rule otherwise would make it impossible for the people of the United States to learn from those who serve the Government vital, necessary and interesting facts relating to the manifold activities of the Federal Government. To rule otherwise would give a monopoly to originate and disseminate information to those who, primarily for political purposes, unfortunately have been given to the spreading of false information. That again is unfair and, therefore, un-American.

It is, I am confident, the purpose of the proponents of this legislation that the new law be thus administered so that the right of free speech will remain, even to those who serve their Government; and that the Government itself shall have full right to place all facts in its possession before the public. If some future Administration should undertake to administer this legislation to the detriment of these rights such action would be contrary to the purpose of the act itself and might well infringe the constitutional rights of citizens. I trust that public vigilance will for all time prevent this.

The Attorney General calls my attention to a practical difficulty which should be corrected by additional legislation as soon as possible. For many years there has been an exception to the Civil Service regulation whereby employes permanently residing in the District of Columbia or in municipalities adjacent thereto may become candidates for or hold municipal office in their municipalities. This and a few similar exceptions should, I believe, be maintained.

The other question relates to the fact that the bill does not in any way cover the multitude of State and local employes who greatly outnumber Federal employes and who may continue to take part in elections in which there are candidates for Federal office on the same ballot with candidates for State and local office. It is held by many who have examined the constitutional question that, because the Congress, under the Constitution, may maintain the integrity of Federal elections, it has the power to extend the objectives of this bill so as to cover State and local government employes who participate actively in Federal elections. This is at least worth the study of the Congress at its next session and therefore before the next Federal election.

It is because for so many years I have striven in public life and in private life for decency in political campaigns, both on the part of Government servants, of candidates, of newspapers, of corporations and of individuals that I regard this new legislation as at least a step in the right direction.

WPA Completes Average of 15 New Buildings a Day

An average of 15 new buildings a day were completed by WPA workers during the eight months ending March 1, it was announced yesterday by Col. F. C. Harrington, works projects commissioner.

Besides completing 3,583 new buildings in that period, WPA workers improved 10,267 and built additions to 338, the announcement added. Of the new buildings, 1,191 were recreational, and 606 were schools and libraries. Nearly half of the modernization projects, or 4,991, were schools.

Hospitals, courthouses, firehouses, warehouses, prisons and aircraft hangars were among other structures built or improved in the same period.

Honeymoon Has Ended

Congress Turns Cold

THE HOUSE'S REJECTION of the President's program had been about 3 in the afternoon, and the President's press conference was to be at 4. News of the debacle in the House had flown through the town, and as we gathered for the press conference, in exceptionally large number—there were upward of 200—we talked of how sensational the debacle had been, and how the President would take it.

Nothing quite like it had ever happened before. The House had not defeated the President's measure—it had not given the measure, or him, the courtesy of administering a defeat. What the House had defeated was the preliminary motion for a rule, that is, a motion providing for a debate on the bill. It was as if a man at a desk had said to a caller with a business proposition, "Take the damn thing out, I won't even talk about it."

All this the newspapermen discussed, while we waited in the lobby. As the door to the President's office opened, there was a faint manner of rush, to get places in the front rows of the crowd that would face the President's desk. One felt sure the President, who is alert and sensitive to psychological atmospheres, was aware of this eagerness to get where they could see the expression of his face as he commented on a serious setback to himself. The President, long a pleased basker in the populace's favor, is likely to learn that there is in human nature a trait which will eye him curiously when he is in defeat.

Michelson Nervous But President Isn't

ON THIS OCCASION he was perfectly game. He achieved gameness without the appearance of trying to. His expression and manner were of smiling ease.

That was in contrast with Charley Michelson. At every press conference Mr. Michelson, in his role of publicity sage for the New Deal, sits a little behind the President, where he can observe the faces of the newspaper men and in other respects watch over this detail of the process of influencing public psychology. Charley, in his long life, has ridden out many a crisis, and achieved great immunity to perturbance. Yet on this occasion he betrayed nervousness by the poker player's unconscious device of covering his mouth with his hand, with fingers and thumb holding the features set, to conceal expression, and guard against any sudden flush of unwanted emotion. Mr. Michelson was apprehensive—but need not have been.

The President was not in the faintest degree nervous or on guard. While the crowd was gathering, he exchanged smiling chat, about his fishing trip and the like, with those who had arrived first and were close to his desk. When the usher closed the door and called out, "All in," Mr. Roosevelt said something jocose about having settled some matters with the front row, and now was there anything else?

Defeated Measure's Benefits Pointed Out

INSTANTLY the expected question came. Had he heard of the action of the House? With a perhaps artificially achieved matter-of-factness, Mr. Roosevelt said he had only heard of it an hour before, and had not had time to reflect on it much. The newspapermen gave him some additional details, exact figures of the vote, the number of Democrats who had voted against him, the fact that the Republicans had voted as a solid unit.

The first part of Mr. Roosevelt's comment was perhaps the part he may have thought out in anticipation of the press conference. It addressed itself to taxpayers and businessmen, classes not heretofore always the primary concern of the President. His comment was that had the bill been passed, in about 60 days industry would have felt its benefits; many men now on relief would have got jobs; now, these men will continue a burden to taxpayers; it will cost taxpayers hundreds of millions. There was talk about how many men are put to work by a given amount of money; the number who get jobs directly on projects, and the number who get jobs "behind the line," supplying materials. It was an exposition of the whole New Deal thesis about spending.

Just the Same Thing That Failed Before

ALL THIS the newspapermen listened to gravely. Most took notes; they knew this press conference was important. They were interested, sympathetic; they all like the President. Yet their manner was faintly detached; it lacked the eagerness with which, in the early days, press conferences used to listen to the New Deal ideas when they were new.

Faintly there was in the manner of the newspapermen that which said, "Yes, yes, we've heard that before." And that was precisely what Congress had said, with less courtesy. The lending bill was just another outpouring of money. All the arguments for it had been made for previous outpourings. That "first fine careless rapture" which had attended New Deal projects when the New Deal was pristine, had gone, and could not be recaptured.

Mr. Roosevelt, early in his Administration, explained the New Deal philosophy. It was—I quote from memory: "Do something; if it doesn't work, try something else." By that New Deal axiom Mr. Roosevelt had justified many things—and received tolerance for many things that went sour.

But, when you have spent $20,000,000,000, and it hasn't worked, and then you start to spend some billions more—that is not trying something else; that is trying the same thing over. This Congress realized.

No Appeasement?

By Barnet Nover

Chamberlain And Parliament

IF ACTIONS are any guide, the Neville Chamberlain of today is a very different individual from the Neville Chamberlain of a year ago.

Last year's policy of appeasement has gone with the wind that destroyed the independence of Czecho-Slovakia and Albania and doomed Republican Spain. Since March, Great Britain has made a complete about-face in her foreign policy. Gone is the belief that with the Sudetenland ceded to Germany there would be "peace in our time." Gone are the inhibitions against far-reaching commitments on the continent of Europe. England's frontier is no longer the Channel or even the Rhine, but the Vistula and the Dardanelles.

THE ACTIONS of the British government during these past four months are impressive. Alliances have been made with Poland and Turkey. Great Britain has become the guarantor of the independence of Rumania and Greece. She has 'thrown overboard her age-old antipathy to conscription. And throwing budgetary considerations to the wind, she has embarked on the most staggering program of rearmament she has ever undertaken in peace time.

Thus, despite the ill-success of the Anglo-Russian negotiations, Prime Minister Chamberlain was probably correct in saying, as he did to the House of Commons yesterday, that "the country is now ready for any emergency." Today, when the British lion roars, his voice is listened to with respect even in Berlin and Rome, where the idea was long entertained that Great Britain was in a state of fatal decadence, "sans eyes, sans teeth, sans everything."

NONETHELESS, the perturbation expressed in the House of Commons over the conduct of Britain's foreign relations during the coming months cannot be dismissed as wholly without validity.

Parliament adjourned this week. It will not reconvene, under ordinary circumstances, until October 3. And the decision whether it should be summoned before then rests not with the members but with the government, i. e., with Mr. Chamberlain. Thus during the next two months, and they may be extremely critical months, the British government will be free of the restraining influence and criticism of the House of Commons.

IF THE POLICY upon which Mr. Chamberlain embarked last March continues to be pursued this may not make very much difference. That policy has the wholehearted support of the opposition groups who have criticized it only because it does not go far enough or move fast enough. But there is also a possibility that, with Parliament adjourned, Mr. Chamberlain will retrace his steps and tread once more the path of appeasement. At least that is what the opposition fears and what such conservative critics as Winston Churchill suspect. "We are safer," he said, "when the House is sitting."

Indeed, one of the strongest reasons why this suspicion of the Chamberlain government's policy exists is that such men as Churchill have not been included in the cabinet. Except for minor changes, the cabinet today is the same as that which made Munich and later presented Parliament with the accomplished fact.

IT IS ALSO a suspicious circumstance that Mr. Chamberlain is so loath to give Parliament any assurance that it will be recalled during the summer should any major crisis develop. It suggests that the government prefers to act without Parliament rather than with it.

Certainly the pressure from within Parliament and from within his own party played a part, it may be a decisive part, in the decision to alter Britain's course. And that pressure reflected mounting public indignation in Great Britain regarding the conduct of the dictators.

It is the circumstance which tends to belie the more nightmarish of the fears entertained by Churchill and others of his mind. The very word "appeasement" has an evil sound to a very large number of Englishmen. And even a government so firmly in the saddle as the present government is would hesitate a long time before flouting public opinion by returning to such a policy. What is more, action of that kind is inhibited by a host of solemn commitments which the British government has assumed.

THE TOUCHSTONE of Mr. Chamberlain's real intentions during the next weeks will be the course of Anglo-Russian negotiations. These negotiations have already been spun out for four months. On the eve of Parliament's adjournment Premier Chamberlain announced that concurrent with the political negotiations staff conversations will be held at Moscow between British, French and Russian military, naval and air representatives. Presumably that means that the political alliance, when made, will be accompanied by a military convention. There is much to be said for such an arrangement, unprecedented though it is. One would have no value without the other. But by the same token the failure to reach a political accord would doom the staff conversations to futility.

If the reports from both London and Moscow are to be believed, the differences that now divide Great Britain and Russia with regard to the sought-for-alliance are not so great as to be unbridgeable. But there must also be the will on both sides to build that bridge. On that point doubt remains both on Russia's part and on Britain's. The next few weeks may tell.

Roosevelt Signs Hatch Politics Ban

asking for additional funds for the Works Progress Administration. Senator Austin, of Vermont, acting Republican leader, disputed the statement. Senator Barkley, Kentucky, Democratic leader, said Mr. Roosevelt was the first President to propose legislation barring Federal officeholders from political activity, but he was sure the President was not seeking to deprive Hatch of credit for the legislation.

"There is enough credit in the bill's enactment," he remarked.

Difference of opinion arose as to whether Presidential approval carries any implication that Mr. Roosevelt will not seek a third term. Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, said it was the first "definite" indication in this direction. Senator King, conservative Utah Democrat, said he thought the new law would obstruct a third-term attempt, adding:

"I hope so, anyway. Too often have persons holding Government positions controlled party nominations."

Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, an Administration supporter, said he did not think the act would have any effect on a third-term movement. The support of Federal officeholders would make little difference to such a movement, he declared.

The bill has been looked upon as an attempt to hobble the New Deal political machine, particularly in the light of the uncertainty as to whether the President will seek a third term. Vice President Garner, spearhead of the antithird-term drive of conservative Democrats, is credited with a large share of responsibility for the bill's passage.

Informed sources take little stock in the idea that the new law will cripple the New Deal organization. In some States, the New Deal will be aided, they said.

The bill strikes directly at the organization built up by Postmaster General Farley. District attorneys, United States marshals, Internal Revenue collectors, and all other State or regional Federal officials will be barred from political activity except, of course, the customary exercise of privileges accorded citizens.

Federal employes, Mr. Roosevelt insisted, shall have the right to answer misrepresentations made in political campaigns, or otherwise, since otherwise the measure would become a "gag act." They shall have the right, he declared, "to give the public factual information."

The bill does not apply, according to the President's interpretation, to borrowers from Government lending agencies, persons receiving social security benefits or unemployment compensation, veterans receiving benefits or pensions, or farmers receiving benefit payments.

Federal jobholders, he said, will have the right to belong to political organizations, attend political rallies, make voluntary political contributions, or express their opinions publicly.

The President's approval of the bill caused speculation as to the future political activities of Thomas G. "Tommy the Cork" Corcoran, Administration trouble-shooter, who played so prominent a part in the 1938 "purge" campaign.

House Refuses Civil Service Grant

Authority, 90 inspectors, and Government Printing Office, 25.

The President and the Budget Bureau had asked $675,000 to make operative the promotional and special training plan, which was ordered June 24, 1938, in an executive order to become effective on February 1, 1938. The House bill allowed only $22,700 to provide six employes for the Council of Personnel Administration.

The committee rejected outright the request for $107,000 to enable the Civil Service Commission to hold the examinations and direct the promotional plan.

The promotional feature, the committee report stated, appears "on its face, at least, a wholly commendable procedure, but one, withal, fraught with difficulties if governed by hard and fast rules. This feature, too, may infringe upon the provisions of the classification act of 1923, as amended. Certainly no such course was contemplated by such act."

While admitting the need for better supervision and management of personnel matters, the committee said:

"The training phase and the phase conditioning promotions upon competitive tests involve aspects which the committee feels should be studied and passed upon by the legislative committees of the Congress having jurisdiction of legislation touching civil service. The training phase envisages a procedure of considerable scope and more than likely ultimately of considerable expense."

Although Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee, was given a special rule June 6 for his bill to blanket 240,000 Government employes into the merit system by noncompetitive examinations, House leaders said yesterday there is no chance of it being called up this session.

The measure, which has the support of all Government employes' organizations, is stanchly opposed by Republican members of the House because of the noncompetitive examination provision.

"Where was the President when all this was done?"

"He was lost in the woods nine days and lived on nothing but berries."

"Say, what do you think of all this third term stuff? Do you think Roosevelt will run or not?"

"There was some sort of strategy in his appointing Paul McSayre as Security Administrator and sending Francis Nutt to the Philippines.

Press Regrets Italy's War Game Stops at Border

Milan, Italy, Aug. 2 (AP).—Italy's Army of the Po took up positions 60 miles from the French border tonight, ready to unleash a counter-offensive tomorrow designed to destroy the forces of an imaginary invader.

The mock invasion from the direction of France occurred last night, when the "Red" army pierced defenses of the frontier garrisons in a surprise attack.

Gamblers on Rex "Bluff" Raiders—Texas "Passes"—Out of Game

The besieged gambling ship Rex (top) foiled attempts of Los Angeles authorities to board it when the crew strung fire hoses over the side and pointed out to the would-be raiders that they were still beyond the 3-mile limit off Santa Monica. Three other boats were boarded, however. One of them, the Texas, was treated as shown in lower photo

The Picture Story of Future Health and Happiness in the Making

1. THREE CHILDREN played games yesterday on a Rockville, Md., farm, games which, while a lot of fun, have an important bearing on their future health and happiness. The trio—William Saunders, Shirley Bott and William Henry Lacey—were the first arrivals at the diabetic juveniles' camp conducted at the Christ Child Farm for Convalescent Children

Post Staff Photos.

2. THE "GAMES" THEY PLAYED might be called tray-fixing and chemistry-tinkering. Whereas the 40 nondiabetic youngsters at the farm have nothing to do with their diet or treatment—except to take it—the two Bills and Shirley weigh and help prepare their own food, perform their health tests and give themselves insulin. All this is under personal supervision of nurses and doctors. They have real sport though, in the "ol' swimming hole." At left—Leila Hulbert is shown here with the two boys. William Saunders (left) makes his own diagnostic test

3. SERIOUSLY ILL when they came for the first time, all are now many pounds heavier and on the road to recovery from one of the most stubborn childhood diseases. Shirley takes a great interest in what she eats, and is shown here with a nurse, weighing her food. Said Shirley, "We're on our own now and, gosh, it's great"

Cleaning the Closet

YOU ARE GOING to be perfectly ruthless this time. You'll throw away at least half of that junk and then maybe you can readily arrange things so they'll look neat and orderly, so you won't be afraid to open your closet door before people . . . so when you hunt for things you won't have the feeling of rummaging in a racket store.

You take out your clothes on their hangers, pile them on your bed. One thing sure—only about half of them will go back.

You start on the shoes. Here's that old pair of scuffed oxfords you had six years ago. Every season you have taken them out and then put them away thinking, "After all, I might go walking some day." And you never have gone walking. No, the thing to do is to give them away. Still . . . well, what if you did want to go walking some fine day this fall? Or suppose you'd buy a little place down in the country some time? Better keep 'em.

Here's that pair of patent leather pumps that were too tight. There's certainly no use keeping them. Still—they do make your feet look small. And maybe some day you might go some place where you'd sit down a lot—yes, you'd better keep them.

When you've finished with the shoes, there's only a dilapidated pair of house slippers ready for the junk man.

YOU DRAG DOWN the array of hat boxes on the closet shelves. How can it be that a woman with only one hat has enough hat boxes to stock a millinery store? You open the boxes. There's last year's pillbox (of course you'll keep that) . . . and the tricorne of the winter before (you might need that to wear on a terribly rainy day) . . . and the old velvet beret of three winters ago (berets are back and you might want to fix it over some time) . . . and that funny little cocktail hat that made you look like a monkey (you might want to dress up in a show some time) . . . and your big white hat of last summer . . . and the one of the summer before (they would be handy if you ever went on a picnic).

You eliminate one hat box by putting its contents into another box and standing on a chair pile the boxes back on the shelf.

NOW THESE PILES of boxes on the closet floor. You are really going to do something about them. All shapes and sizes, they greet your eyes. Here's one filled with Christmas gift wrappings (that goes back) . . . one with newspaper clippings (that goes back) . . . one with old kodak pictures (that goes back) . . . one with old dress scraps (that goes back).

Well, you'll throw away all the empty boxes. That big candy box for instance. Still—it would be wonderful to pack a picnic lunch in. Those two big suit boxes, now there's no use in keeping them—oh, but you might need them to carry things downtown . . . or to send things away in. Now all those small empty boxes—still they're so pretty and shiny . . . and you might need 'em for Christmas presents. You return all the boxes except a battered shoe box without a lid.

YOU TURN to the pile of clothes hangers. There's that white chiffon with the cigarette holes. Now there's no earthly use—still you might make a scarf out of it some day. And the black velvet all shiny at the sitting down place—it's gone completely. Yet—it might be made over some day with a tunic. That old blue wool with the fur bandings—no, you always liked that dress. And there were times that you were very happy in it. You put all the dresses back in the closet.

There's one thing you will do, though. You'll carry every one of John's old, big, cumbersome suits into his own closet this minute. Why on earth he has to be always hanging his things in your's when he has one of his own you can't see. Of course, his is crowded—but then that's his own fault. If he wouldn't have a fit every time you tried to give something of his away he'd have plenty of room.

You gather up his things resolutely. The blended aroma of worsted and tobacco from the load in your arms makes you pause. Poor fellow! He'll look around so helplessly when he finds his things gone—oh, well, you'll leave them this time.

You survey the closet. A little more orderly perhaps, but just as crowded as ever. Oh, well, you've done your best. And anyway—well, that closet never was big enough.

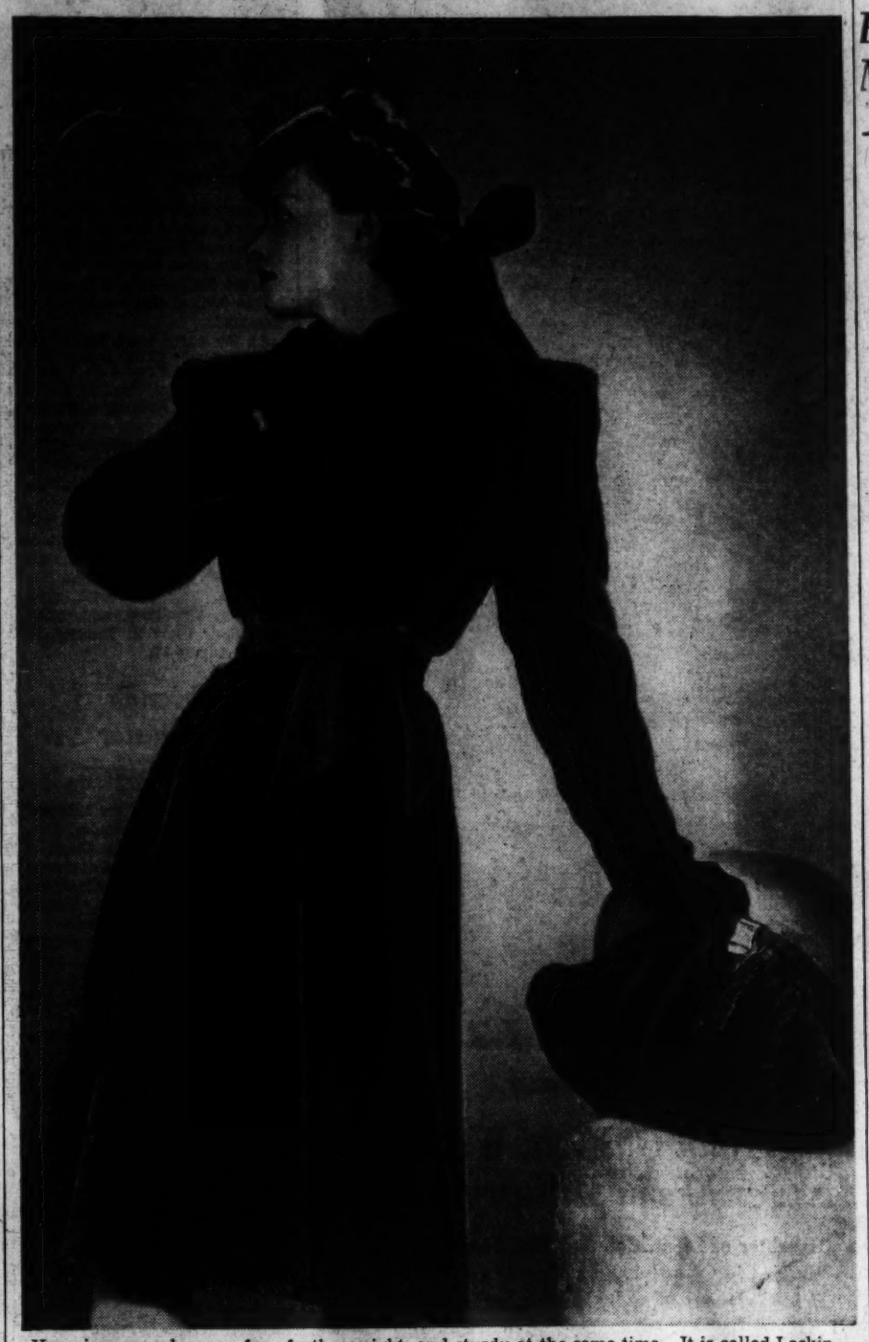
Lamb in Role of Beaver



Here is a supple new fur, featherweight and sturdy at the same time. It is called Laskin-mouton-beaver because of its close similarity in texture and color to sheared beaver. Much less hard on the purse strings, however, is this processed lambskin which has that dull, sleek look of more luxurious moutons. Its supple draping qualities, chemical resistance to water and adaptability to many occasions should endear this topper to budgeteering debs, office toilers or girls off to school. This fitted swagger style with its matching suede belt is wonderfully becoming to Slim Jennys

D. C. Home Economist Gives Delicious Ice Cream Recipe

Peaches Cooked With Brown Sugar Are Appetizing Combination With Vanilla or Peach Cream; Served With Fruit Syrup

By Martha Ellyn,

The Post Food Editor.

ICE CREAM is not just a dessert, but one of the grandest of foods. In the days when automobiles were "implements of Satan," and airplanes were "contraptions," ice cream was sometimes considered a detriment to the digestive system because of its coldness. But all of that has been changed with the march of science, and physicians consider it a boon in helping to satisfy appetites and furnish nourishment.

MRS. BURTIS

Mrs. Alice M. Burtis, our guest editor today, is a native of Washington. She was graduated from the Washington Normal School, and taught in the Washington public schools before taking special courses in child feeding and care and cookery. Six years ago Mrs. Burtis joined the staff of the Southern Dairies as home economist, and in her work renders an information service to the public wishing to know how to serve ice cream in its many forms and the various combinations with fruits and sirups and other accessories. Mrs. Burtis lectures to groups interested in the many possibilities of ice cream serving.

The following recipe is the one Mrs. Burtis gives The Post food readers as her favorite recipe.

Ice Cream With Peaches

Melt 2 tablespoonfuls of butter in a heavy frying pan. Place in it 10 large peach halves, sprinkle with brown sugar and gently cook until heated through and lightly browned, turning once. Dust with cinnamon and place a peach half, hollowside up, in each of 6 dessert glasses. Put a ball of either peach or vanilla ice cream on the peach and top with sauce made by chopping remaining 4 peach halves in the sirup in the pan.

Turn Nerves Into Charm

"Don't do that, it drives me crazy!" A typical complaint from the woman whose nerves are frayed, who gives way at the idle tapping of a pencil.

How men hate such a display of nerves—and the tragedy of it is such girls are naturally of the warm, emotional type to which men turn for understanding. They need only to adjust their delicate nerves to ze radiant, beloved.

But, unaware that they are like finely tuned violins, they let their emotions get "unstrung," strain their nerves to the breaking point.

Worries, fears, resentments—how they can run away with you if you are an imaginative, sensitive nervous type. Perhaps you fret because you aren't pretty, you fear John no longer "cares," you brood over the unfairness of your office manager.

No wonder you are overwrought and tense, suffer from nerve symptoms such as headaches, indigestion. Regain poise, balance, let your nerves bring joy instead of misery.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Avoid and Overcome Nervous Troubles," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

A nerve specialist would tell you to take a detached view of situations that trouble you, pretend you are the audience, not the actor. And if at first you can't detach yourself from the scene so easily, relieve pent-up feelings with a good cry in private.

'Reducers' Foods' Give You Something To Eat, Minus Calories

THERE are tricks to dieting that will make reducing easy ...well, easier! Some of the best are the "reducers' foods." There are no reducing foods. But there are foods which make diet a matter of substituting rather than going without.

Probaly what you miss most in the diet is butter, and there is a butterless spread to take its place. The spread looks and tastes like butter and yet it contains no calories. Don't mistake it for one of the regular butter substitutes. They contain as many calories as the real thing, about 100 per tablespoon.

There are a number of tasty low caloric biscuits to fill up the empty spaces. You can have Melba, either the whole wheat or white variety, at 23 calories per slice; crisp rye wafers for 20 calories each; Vitamin B1 wafers, containing 15 calories each, which are particularly good in the reducer's diet since it is often low in this vitamin.

Bran Biscuit Are Chewy

Several kinds of gluten biscuits, originated for diabetics, are being used extensively in reducing diets. They are extremely low in calories. The bran and agar biscuits are an excellent source of bulk and contain practically no calories. Besides being low in calories these biscuits are chewy . . . and the chewy foods tend to satisfy.

If black coffee gives you a bad start for the day, use cream and sugar. One tablespoon of cream contains 30 calories, one lump of sugar, 25. All good reducers will tell you, however, that once you get used to your coffee black, you like it better that way. Saccharin is a sugar substitute many times sweeter than sugar and it contains no calories.

There are many ways of making a diet easier and I believe you should use them. For example, the meal should always be planned around one hot dish . . . it is much more satisfying. If you have any other hot dish, take a hot soup or beverage. You will notice that I said or! The liquid taken with the meal should be restricted to 8 ounces, since excess liquid taken with food does tend to increase the size of the stomach and the appetite.

Something to Stick to Ribs

Each meal should also contain some food which sticks to the ribs, such as an egg for breakfast, cheese at luncheon, lean meat at dinner. These protein foods are highly satisfying and they help avert hunger pangs.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, Aug. 2.

IT'S A GOOD thing Gov. Dickinson of Michigan wasn't around when Mr. John and Mr. Fred opened their new hat salon last Tuesday. I fear he'd have seen many an innocent young girl tottering on one of those "hellish brinks" and like to teeter over it any minute. It was the nearest thing our town has seen to the formal opening of a Hollywood hardware store, with sun-arcs, searchlights, ropes, cops and autograph hunters. It was a "party of the year."

Mr. John and Mr. Fred are among the millinery toppers of this or any other country, and are very prankish fellows indeed—with a great deal of method in their foolery. For the opening they hired ten lads to walk around the block picketing their place, carrying such signs as "John and Fred are unfair to organized husbands."

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: That party corralled a large crowd of well-known women, too. Katharine Cornell and Katharine Hepburn, of the theatuh, graced it with their presence, and Miriam Hopkins, Gloria Swanson, Marie Brian and little Marie Wilson represented Hollywood.

Mary Anita Loos, the young beauty who did the affair's press work, brought her little aunt, Anita Loos, author of "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes" and scores of movies. They are now about to revive that show, with revisions, and the little Wilson blonde is going to play the part done in the picture by Ruth Taylor—who is now Mrs. Paul Zuckerman, of Park avenue, and has a family.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Very Nice Boy, Very Bashful, First Courts Girl and Then Turns Fickle; Should She Give Up Hope?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About eight months ago I started going steady with the nicest boy I have ever met, and also the most bashful. After going with me for three months, he broke off unexpectedly. His reason was that he thought he liked another girl better—a girl he had dated before he met me. After another three months, he asked me for a date, which I had to refuse, as I had another engagement.

Still later, we were fellow guests at a house party and he asked me for a date. I went with him and we had a grand time, but the next day he was very cool and left without saying good-by to me. Do you think there is any use for me to go on wishing for him and thinking about him? Or should I give him up? Supposing he asks me, should I accept further dates, which only make me like him better? Or should I politely refuse? DISILLUSIONED.

DEAR DISILLUSIONED: Why must youth always be engaged in trying to settle everything with utter finality? Far better to take things more or less as they come. As Aldous Huxley points out in his excellent, if brutally cynical book, "Point Counterpoint," it seldom behooves the individual to attempt to put a final shape or end to any human relationship, since life comes along and does it so much more effectively—and finally—any way.

You will find it more profitable in the long course of time to bend to the winds of chance, to flow with the tides of fate, in making tolerable adjustments in your social relationships. What such behavior amounts to, is taking the goods the gods provide and making the most of them. If, in this present phase of your existence, this one boy is your Heart's Dearest, you probably will be acting just as wisely, in seeing as much of him as you can, as you would be in refusing to see him at all, simply because he doesn't fully reciprocate your devotion.

When he is out of sight, you may, of course, keep him out of mind as much as possible. But when he is close at hand, and eager or willing to see you, I see no reason why you should tie yourself in knots in an effort to seem indifferent. What if he knows you care quite intensely? That's no crime; no disgrace. It is given to nearly everyone to care more for another, and perhaps several others, than they care in turn. But these, in turn, meet the same experience at still other hands. And I sometimes think, indeed—as witness the poets—that it is virtually necessary to love unrequitedly, now and again, in order to search one's emotional capacity to its depths.

Plans Weiner Roast

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I will be 15 my next birthday and I am going to give a weiner roast. Do you have any suggestions as to games we should play? How should I write the invitations? The boys and girls will be between 15 and 17 years of age. I hope you can answer this right away. LOUISE.

Suggested Games

DEAR LOUISE: If this is to be a late afternoon picnic affair winding up with the weiner roast as a grand finale (after which everyone will be going home), it would be nice to have it near beach or pool, with water sports the principal diversion. If swimming is "out," how about horseshoes, charades and croquet?

It wouldn't be much trouble to take along a croquet outfit and set it up, and the paraphernalia for a horseshoe game would be equally convenient to tote. Charades can be made up on the spot, although you could plan some ideas in advance. Drop-the-handkerchief could be a hilarious game, if everyone played it with tongue in his cheek. The game of ghosts is another possibility.

Don't try to stick to a hard-and-fast program of entertainment. Once you have started the ball of fun rolling, if the guests seem inclined to take the bit in their teeth and amuse themselves, let well enough alone. Suggest a second game when the first begins to lose general interest. You might even have checkers or dominoes in reserve for the more indolent side-line sitters. Ball games are another idea—soft ball, hand ball, volley ball, etc.

Since the party is to be definitely informal, wouldn't it be better to telephone the invitations, rather than write them? However, if written invitations are necessary to reach some invitees—make your notes brief and chatty. And you might give the guests some idea of what to wear. That is to say, slacks or shorts for the girls, jerseys and slacks for the boys, if there is to be rough-and-tumble entertainment. And you would suggest bringing bathing suits along, of course, if swimming is to be available. M. H.

Mrs. Henry F. Grady Is Dynamic, Vivacious

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

THE APPOINTMENT OF Henry F. Grady as Assistant Secretary of State, succeeding the newly named High Commissioner of the Philippines, Francis B. Sayre, brings into the spotlight one of Washington's most popular hostesses—vivacious Lucretia del Valle Grady, whose name and fame as a speaker and organizer are known from coast to coast.

Early last month, Dr. and Mrs. Grady, accompanied by their daughter, Patricia, left for an across-the-country motor trip that included dozens of speaking engagements. They are now in Dallas, Tex., en route to Washington and are expected to be back on Monday.

Back in the prime of the New Deal when Mrs. Grady first arrived in Washington with her husband (he was then tariff adviser to the Secretary of State), I had an interview with her and discovered one of the most dynamic personalities I have ever run across in Washington.

Ancestral Home Is Camulos Ranch

Charming—much as that word is over-used in Washington—certainly is a fitting description for her. And if other complimentary adjectives are to be bandied about, I can think of any number, including "attractive" and "selfless" that also can be applied to this woman, who hails from California, but is widely known in Washington.

Out West she is known the length and breadth of her native State as the daughter of Senator R. F. Valle who went to Mexico as President Wilson's special representative; but she has also been widely acclaimed on her own merits.

The Valles, as anybody in California can tell you, made their home on Camulos ranch, which was granted to them by the King of Spain; is still one of California's landmarks and was the setting for Helen Hunt Jackson's famous novel, "Ramona." The book's character of San Moreno is generally accepted as a portrayal of Dona Ysabel del Valle, Mrs. Grady's grandmother, who was mistress of Camulos at that time, while Mrs. Grady's father has been identified as the Felipe of the story.

From the Stage to Real Drama

Although Mrs. Grady is a typical Spanish beauty, she is only half Spanish. Her mother's ancestors, of whom one was William White, signer of the Compact of the Pilgrims, came over on the Mayflower, settled for a time in New England and gradually drifted to the West.

In something of the pioneer spirit that led her ancestors across the country, the former Lucretia del Valle charted her early career along unusual paths. In an era when her feminine friends were majoring in domestic science, English or foreign languages, she chose political science, and studied at the University of California. Later, she continued her education at Columbia University and in London.

Another of her absorbing interests for a number of years was the theater. Despite the fact that back in her youth girls of good families rarely sought a career behind the footlights, she had a fling on the stage in the East and also played the feminine role in John Steven McGroarty's famous Mission Play at San Gabriel for a number of seasons.

Eventually, however, she became absorbed in the drama of historic and political movements. She was a leader in California's fight for woman suffrage; and when that cause won, she turned her attention to other fields. She became vice chairman of the California State Democratic Committee, and eventually vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Likes People, Parties—And Politics

Washington, however, knows her better as a hostess—one who has few peers and fewer superiors. She's a genius at collecting groups on the spur of the moment for pleasant parties in her apartment at the Highlands. She can entertain, with equal grace, at formal parties—but prefers the other type.

She has a flair for dress; wears up-to-the-minute fashions (I'll wager she has already bought a bustle) and goes in for bright colors that set off her flashing brown eyes, dark hair and creamy complexion.

But Mrs. Grady's real charm lies in her ability to turn the spotlight away from herself, and in her youthful outlook that is reflected in everything she does and says.

By her own admission she adores "parties, people, and politics." She believes she "can learn something from anybody, and everybody;" she concentrates on the best qualities of every person she meets; and she knows "only one person in all the world" whom she dislikes (and she won't say who that is). But don't get the idea that she is a sort of streamlined Pollyanna. Not at all. Pollyanna must have been a bore. Lucretia del Valle Grady is a fascinating lady, if there ever was one.

Doris Ridgely, John Penello Are Engaged

The engagement of Miss Doris Helen Ridgely to John Penello, of Baltimore, has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles duPont Ridgely, of Camden, Del. Last night Mrs. John Randall Arnold, aunt of the prospective bride, entertained at a shower in her honor at her home here on Macomb street.

Miss Ridgely attended the College of William and Mary and studied art at State Teachers' College at Fredericksburg, Va.

The bridegroom-elect received his A. B. degree from William and Mary College as well as his law degree. He is a member of the Virginia bar and an attorney for the National Labor Relations Board in Baltimore.

Miss Gregg Wed At Purcellville

A wedding of interest in Virginia took place yesterday afternoon when Miss Barbara May Gregg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Bentley Gregg, became the bride of Samuel Benjamin Welsh, son of Mrs. A. W. Welsh and the late Mr. Welsh, at the Purcellville Baptist Church. The Rev. H. B. Cole officiated and Mrs. N. B. Hawthorne played the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white lace, with a picture hat. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

Lieut. John Oldfield Weds Miss Jeschke in Military Rites

Daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Jeschke Married in Chapel at Fort Myer; Bride Is Given Away by Her Father

At one of the loveliest military weddings of the season, Miss Margaret Devereux Jeschke became the bride of Lieut. John Sherman Oldfield, U. S. M. C., yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Chapel of Fort Myer.

The bride is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Richard Hall Jeschke, U. S. M. C., and the granddaughter of Mrs. John Ryan Devereaux and the late Dr. Devereaux. Lieut. Oldfield is the son of Judge and Mrs. Edward D. Oldfield, of Oklahoma City.

The bride was presented to society last season by her parents at a large tea given in December at Portledge, home of her grandmother in Chevy Chase.

Palms and ferns adorned the church and a vase of gladioli was placed on both sides of the altar. Chaplain John F. Hughes, U. S. N., assisted by the Rev. Father Thomas Smyth, officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a white mousseline de soie gown over satin. The gown was inserted with two panels of rose point lace, belonging to the bride's grandmother. Her veil was of tulle and lace, and she carried a small shower bouquet of white orchids.

Wearing a peach organdy frock, Miss Margaret Ellen Lavender, of New York City, was maid of honor. The gown was fashioned with a tight basque and very bouffant skirt. Striking a new style note, she wore a mantle of the same material edged in tulle which fell from her head into a point touching her shoulder. She carried a fan fashioned out of sprays of lilies of the valley and gladioli.

Five Bridesmaids In Procession

The remaining attendants were Miss Esther Allen, of Nashville, Tenn.; Mrs. David Stonecliff, Miss Barbara Jeschke, a cousin of the bride; Miss Joan Boye and Gean Harris.

They were gowned in green organdy frocks made in the same manner as that of the maid of honor. They also were organdy mantles about their heads and carried fans of flowers.

Lieut. William Baird Oldfield attended as best man for his brother, and ushers were Lieut. Floyd Moore, Lieut. William Buchanan, Lieut. F. Paul Henderson, Lieut. Richard Wallace, Lieut. Howard Hiett and Lieut. Carl Youndal.

After the ceremony a large reception was held at the Army and Navy Country Club. Assisting the young couple in receiving was Mrs. Jeschke, whose frock was of pink chiffon with a V neckline and full skirt. Mrs. Oldfield had chosen a black georgette for the occasion.

Off for Honeymoon In New England

When the young couple left for their honeymoon to New England the bride was wearing a black sheer crepe frock trimmed in white. Upon their return Lieut. and Mrs. Oldfield will make their home at Marine Barracks in Quantico, Va.

The bride attended George Washington University, where she was a member of Pi Beta Phi. Lieut. Oldfield was graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1935, then entered the Marine Corps.

French Envoy Host to 'Comite St. Die-Amerique'

The French Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, entertained recently at a garden party at the Embassy in honor of the "Comite St. Die-Amerique," headed by the Mayor of St. Die, France, M. Jacquerez, who visited New York and Washington on a good-will tour.

The "Comite St. Die-Amerique" was created after the World War to recall that it was in the Vosges town of St. Die that on April 25, 1507, under the reign of Rene II, Duke of Lorraine, a book was printed, "Cosmographiae Introductio," in which, for the first time in history, the word "America" appeared.

While here the delegation laid a wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington. They also called at the White House, where they were received by the President's aide, Gen. Edwin Watson. There they left several books relating to the history of St. Die.

Phi Mu Gets New Sisters By Merger

Alpha Delta Theta, Young Sorority With Few Members, To Be Considered

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Phi Mu Sorority is gaining a whole chapter of new "sisters" without even the formality of an initiation. By action of the two national organizations, Alpha Delta Theta has been merged with Phi Mu, the action affecting all of the active chapters, including that on the campus of George Washington University.

For several years Alpha Delta Theta has been among the smaller of the national Penhellenic groups and the individual chapters have found it difficult to maintain themselves. However, as long as the national organizations existed, every effort was made to have the college groups carry on.

The girls of Alpha Delta Theta at George Washington were glad to receive news of the merger, according to Dean Vinnie Barrows of the university. This sorority, established nationally in 1919, was among the youngest in the Panhellenic association. The local chapter, installed in 1926, was one of but 18 in the country and had a membership of less than 20, making its manitenance somewhat of a hardship for the girls. They welcome the prospect of the coming year as members of Phi Mu, one of the oldest national sororities in the United States (having been established in 1852) and one of the strongest.

Clare Hall Heads Phi Mu

Phi Mu now has 68 chapters. That at George Washington was installed in 1915 and its membership is now between 30 and 40. Clare Hall, of Chevy Chase, who is its president, will head the combined group and Edith Renner, of Washington, who was president of the Alpha Delta Theta Chapter, with members of her board, will relinquish office in favor of the leaders elected by Phi Mu.

Officers, in addition to Miss Hall, include Mary Foscue, who lives at Strong Hall, first vice president; Alice Fracker, of Washington, second vice president; Kay Bower, of Washington, recording secretary; Alice Miller, of Kensington, corresponding secretary; Mary Ann Green, also a resident of Strong Hall, treasurer. Mrs. John A. Hall is president of the Mothers' Club, and Mrs. Harold Stepler, of Arlington, Va., alumnae adviser. Mrs. Ruth Blackwelder has been alumnae adviser to the Alpha Delta Theta Chapter.

Because the merger of the two national groups has taken place since the close of the spring semester, news of it has reached but few members of the other sororities. Even Miss Jane Coulter, of Zeta Tau Alpha, president of the George Washington Panhellenic Council, who has returned from a vacation in Illinois, did not learn it until yesterday.

Ten Sororities On G. W. Campus

The merger will reduce the number of sororities in the council to 10, she says. The others include Pi Beta Phi, Chi Omega, Sigma Kappa, Alpha Delta, Pi, Delta Zeta, Kappa Delta, Zeta Tau Alpha, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Phi Sigma Sigma.

The house at 802 Twenty-first street northwest, which was rented and used as a chapter house by Phi Mu last year, has been bought by the university and is being remodeled to accommodate three sororities. Whether the Phi Mus will be there again next year or will all be assigned to Sorority Hall, 2129 G street, where Alpha Delta Thetas were located last year, has not been settled, says Dean Barrows.

League Presses Ramspeck Bill

The National League of Women's Voters, through its vice president, Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of Washington, has called on the closing Congress to stop the flow of patronage as well as concern itself with bailing out "pernicious political activity."

"If Congress really wants to strike a death blow to the patronage system, it will follow its action on the Hatch bill by enacting the Ramspeck bill, which has been waiting House action for three months, authorizing the placing of all employes of the Federal Government under the merit system," said Mrs. Baldwin.

She called attention to an apt analogy made by Representative Caroline O'Day, of New York, in the Congressional Record (July 24) as follows:

"Mr. Speaker, one of the early tests of feeble-mindedness in children, I have been told, was to direct the child in question to bail out a bucket into which water from a tap was running. If the child stayed at the task all day, it was a sure sign that he was feebleminded because any average child would soon discover the source of the water and turn off the tap.

"I am reminded of this illustration by two bills, one of which has passed the House, the other is waiting action by this body.

"There has been a great fuss over politics in relief, political activity by Federal employes, and much to-do over the Hatch bill prohibiting 'pernicious political activity.'

"Much less public attention has been given to the bill introduced by the distinguished chairman of the Civil Service Committee, Mr. Ramspeck, of Georgia. This bill would place the bulk of Federal employes within the scope of the Civil Service system. Mr. Ramspeck's bill would shut off the flow of patronage, automatically eliminating pernicious political activity.

"The House may draw its own conclusions."

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. HENRY GRATTAN DOYLE, president of the Board of Education and active in many women's organizations of the city, has gone to Middlebury, Vt., to join Dr. Doyle, who is teaching there this summer.

THERE IS A TIME for everything and others connected with the schools agree that this is the time for vacations. The District Congress of Parents and Teachers has closed its office in the N. E. A. Building during the month of August, while the secretary, Mrs. Stuart Hollar, takes a holiday and the officers and committee chairmen rest up so as to be ready to start things off with their usual efficiency in September.

However, unofficially and strictly off the record, Mrs. C. D. Lowe, new president of the congress, may be found working on P.-T. A. plans at the "closed" office almost any time. If you ask her about it, she'll say there were just a few little things which had to be done—not real work, of course.

A CARD from Nell V. Smith, president of the Professional Writers' Club, brings the cool news that it was written in the Arctic Circle—in the Land of the Midnight Sun.

MRS. JOSEPH A. HERBERT, JR., active in the associate membership of the Congressional Club, is enjoying a trip in the West. She visited in Portland, San Francisco, San Jose, stopped in Yellowstone Park, and plans to return by way of the Grand Canyon.

Red Cross Stages Birthday Party For Effie Roberts

A birthday luncheon was given yesterday at the District Chapter House of the American Red Cross, honoring Mrs. Effie Roberts, a member of the professional staff for 25 years. Co-workers on the Red Cross staff were present.

The luncheon was arranged by Mrs. William S. Spencer, canteen chairman, who has been a member of the volunteer corps of the Red Cross for 40 years.

Others who attended included Otto S. Lund, chapter manager; Mrs. Margaret Robbins, assistant secretary-treasurer for 20 years; Mrs. Carlos Bell, secretary of home service; Mrs. F. H. Tewes, secretary of volunteer service; Robert Duncan, acting director of instruction in first aid and his assistant, Woodrow W. Nealey; Miss Mary Columbus, Mrs. Violet Zacarin, Mrs. Jessie Muckenhirn and Miss Caroline Rose.

Writer Tells Zontas How Career Began

Ina Andrews Barris' First Story, Written at 13, Was Not Published

A career as a writer, begun at the age of 13, was described yesterday by Ina Andrews Barris, of Bloomsbury, Pa., noted author, who addressed the Zonta Club at its weekly luncheon at the Y. W. C. A. Her first story, "Lady Gwendolyn's Lovers," was not published, she admitted, but since then 5 books and 100 stories and articles have been.

Mrs. Barris laughed as she recalled that her first story was inspired by nickel melodramas, loaned to her by her mother's hired girl. She patterned "Lady Gwendolyn's Lovers" after these as nearly as possible.

Her professional writing has included children's books and tales of adventure. In the latter, she always begins with the setting, she said, as for instance, Brazil, the rainy season, and a river, and from that basis works out the plot. A theme such as jealousy or constancy is her beginning for a love story.

Mrs. Barris' latest book, which will be published in the fall, is "Red Tassels for Huki."

Monticello D. A. R. Members Pass Summer Vacations in Various Ways

Members of Monticello Chapter, D. A. R., caught by a summer wanderlust, have devised a variety of ways of finding change from winter's social whirl. Some are touring the country, some getting sun tan at the seaside and others are enjoying mountain resorts. New England seems the choice of a large number.

Mrs. Roger Williams, State registrar, is planning a leisurely visit to the fair, and along the shores of New England, stopping at Cape Cod.

Mrs. Samuel Woodbridge, former State librarian, is also in New England. She is of the well known Adams family of the "Mayflower States."

Mrs Amy Hammond will motor, with her son, to Massachusetts, remaining there for a vacation. Another member who has a preference for New England is Miss Elizabeth Bourn, who has gone, as is her custom, to Ogonquit, Me.

Mrs. Frank Broadhead Whitaker, of Los Angeles, whose daughter, Geraldine, became the bride recently of Ensign David Bonar Bell, formerly of this city, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Henry Vale, in Newport. Mrs. Vale is a member of Monticello Chapter, and Mrs. Whitaker will be in Washington for the winter season.

Mrs. Ashmun Brown and Mr. Brown are following their custom, spending the summer at their mountain home, Blue Ridge Summit, Pa. They left the city in May. Mrs. Brown, past regent and now chapter treasurer, is an active member of the very progressive garden club in that section.

Mrs. J. W. Johnson, returning from a tour of the Southern States, California and the National Parks, and a visit to both the fairs, is now at her old home in Lynchburg, Va.

Enjoying life at the beaches are Mrs. Ruel Tolman and Mr. Tolman, who go for week-ends to their place at Felicity Cove, on Chesapeake Bay; Mrs. Frank Carden and Mrs. George Dempster, who spent short vacations at Atlantic City; Mrs. James Kirkland and her little daughter, Margaret, who are at Mrs. Stephen Kramer's cottage at Rehoboth Beach, where Miss Constance Kramer also spends the week-end; and Mrs. Roy Pipes, who spends much time at her cottage there.

Miss Katherine Wootten, after attending State functions of the Daughters of 1812, in Atlanta, cruised to Havana. She was entertained by resident D. A. R. members there.

The regent, Mrs. Leo Kasehagen, and Mr. Kasehagen, motored to Pittsburgh for a visit with their son and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Leo Kasehagen 3d, at Carnegie Institute of Technology. They later went to Roanoke, Va., for the State convention of the Spanish-American War Veterans and Auxiliary, and, this month will be at their country home, Higginbotham Farm, in Virginia. An attractive feature of this will be the annual homecoming at the little church nearby.

Mrs. Francis Shore, chapter vice regent, has returned from Indiana. Mrs. Francis Shore, jr., vacationed in North Carolina, her former home.

Other members who are planning August holidays are Mrs. Edward Sasnett, who will visit in New York; Mrs. Courtney Thomas, who will visit relatives in Los Angeles; Mrs. Katherine Gill, who also goes to California; Miss Helen White, who will go to Chicago; Mrs. Charles Grindle and Miss Nellie Thomas, who will visit relatives in Pennsylvania, Vermont and Massachusetts; Mrs. Parks Crater and Mr. Crater, who will take a motor trip, and Mrs. McKenney Berry, who is spending some time in New York.

House Votes Tax Assessor 26 Workers

$105,000 Granted For Care of Needy Insane Patients At St. Elizabeth's

The District tax assessor will be able to hire 26 new employes to administer the new income tax law as a result of an appropriation of $47,260 voted by the House yesterday in the third deficiency bill.

The House Appropriations Committee allowed all but $12,166 of the budgetary recommendations for the District or a total of $257,766.17. Most of the money will go to cover minor deficiencies.

Auditor Daniel J. Donovan told the committee that the new personnel for the assessor's office was made necessary because of a reduction of $51,940 in the 1940 supply bill under the 1939 appropriation. It is expected that most of the new employes to be hired will be taken from the 29 dismissed with the expiration of the business privilege tax June 30.

Navy Construction Refused

The largest single District item is $105,000 for care of indigent insane patients at St. Elizabeths Hospital. The major slashes were in school items, chief of which was the elimination of an item for seven new teachers at Mary Washington vocational school.

Other deductions in the third deficiency bill of local interest, though not chargeable to the District budget, involve the development of the George Washington Memorial Parkway, and some 250 Navy Department employes.

Despite the warning of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission that prices for land along the Potomac are rising, the committee refused to allow $150,000 to match a Maryland appropriation for the purchase of a parkway tract between the District and Great Falls, on the Maryland side of the river.

Likewise the committee refused to recommend $445,000 for a new story on the temporary Navy Department Building to accommodate 250 new employes. Members expressed a disinclination to add to the old structure while legislation is now in Congress to authorize construction of a Navy Building.

Improvements allowed the Government buildings in the District included $270,000 for alterations and new elevators at Smithsonian Institution; $44,000 for power plant at Bureau of Standards, and $12,000 for furnishings at NaNtional Institute of Health now under construction near Bethesda, Md.

The bill contains $7,250 for the preparation of a site for the Oscar S. Straus Memorial to be erected with donated funds in the Great Plaza, which is bounded on the west by the Commerce Building, on the south by the Labor and Interstate Commerce Buildings, on the east by the Postoffice Building, and on the north by the District Building.

Park Item Refusal Deplored

Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, last night deplored elimination of the park item, but expressed hope that it may be restored by the Senate. Upon recommendation of the planning body, President Roosevelt recently urged Congress to grant the $150,000.

At hearings ten days ago before the House Appropriations Committee, John Nolen, jr., director of planning; Settle and Irving C. Root, representing the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission argued in behalf of the allotment.

A similar funds-matching arrangement is being employed for development of the parkway along the Virginia side of the river.

Capital News In Brief

Woman Slugged by Thief

Sneak thieves collected $245 from four apartments yesterday and the night before, one slugging a woman in the hallway of her home.

Thieves took a total of $186 from the apartments of Lucy Hansucker, of 1829 G street northwest, and Charles H. Kenlan, of 501 Eleventh street northwest. Miss Hasucker, a War Department secretary, lost $61, while Kenlan, a Postoffice Department employe, was robbed of $125.

Art's Lure Too Great

Art holds such a lure for 5-year-old Stephen Phelps, of 1227 Thirteenth street northwest that he passed up both lunch and dinner yesterday to spend the hours with brush and paint.

His mother reported the child missing at 10 a. m. Police and neighbors kept a sharp lookout, but no Stephen. At about 6 p. m. Russell Bender, of the Thirteenth street address, thought of looking into a vacant house nearby, being remodeled. There was Stephen, oblivious to time and happily exploiting the wonders of brush and paint.

500 at Catholic U. Banquet Honor Dr. Roy J. Deferrari

Latin Scholar Who Directs Summer Session Presented With Scroll by Mgr. Corrigan on Behalf of Pupils, Faculty

More than 500 students and faculty members last night observed the twenty-ninth anniversary of Catholic University's summer session and honored Dr. Roy J. Deferrari, director of the session, at a banquet held in the University gymnasium.

DEFARRARI

Dr. Deferrari, a Latin scholar who is director of the summer session for the last 11 years, saw the enrollment grow from 450 to 1,800 students and the courses increase from 80 to 400, was presented with a testimonial scroll by the Right Rev. Joseph M. Corrigan, university rector, on behalf of the students and faculty.

The testimonial scroll paid tribute to Dr. Deferrari's "splendid vision and tireless efforts." The parchment recorded the hope that "the benefit of his splendid gifts be long continued to the university and to the cause of Catholic education in democracy."

Part of Golden Jubilee

The anniversary celebration and testimonial were part of the university's observance of its golden jubiless this year.

Work of Dr. Deferrari, who has also achieved recognition for his volumes on Latin and Church figures, was praised by the Right Rev. Edward B. Jordan, dean of the Catholic Sisters' College, who spoke for the clergy; Dr. John B. Parker, chairman of the department of biology, for the lay faculty; Sister M. Olivia Gowan, O. S. B., dean of the Nursing School, for the sisters; Dr. Ruth Reed, associate professor of social research, for the lay women teachers.

Mgr. Corrigan said that in Dr. Deferrari he had found the three major qualifications he desired in a colleague: capacity, diligence and loyalty. "His name is honored and respected in places where but for him Catholic University would be unknown," declared the rector. "And his name is honored and respected also in the highest academic places of the world."

Nuns at Banquet

The Very Rev. Dr. Ignatius Smith, O. P., dean of the School of Philosophy, was toastmaster.

Nuns of various orders attended the banquet by special permission of their superiors, and 20 sisters of Blessed Sacrament and School Sisters of Notre Dame received such permission for the first time. The sisters presented Dr. Deferrari with a spiritual bouquet.

Arlington Exacts $1 Fee for Dog, Then Dooms It

A Secret Service agent was ordered by court to pay $1 for a dog license yesterday only to hear the mongrel sentenced to death a few minutes later.

Testimony in Arlington Police Court yesterday disclosed that the mongrel, Prince, was a playmate of Waldo E. Stevens' three children. Last November the Stevenses moved to 1133 North Utah street, Arlington, formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Hull. Just before moving, it appears, Hull had brought home Prince as a pet, but Prince instead of going along with the Hulls, attached himself to the Stevens' youngsters.

Then W. Harry Johnson happened by. Johnson is the game warden. He was looking for Prince, who was charged with attacking a child. Stevens testified he did not own the mongrel, but was ordered nevertheless to buy the license. Then Prince was ordered shot.

Ickes Reveals Park Survey For District

System May Be Put On Par With Set-ups Of Other Cities

The first move in what is expected to be a revolutionary change in the administration of the Capital's park system was taken yesterday by Secretary of Interior Ickes.

Heralding a campaign to place the office of National Capital Parks on a par with the great metropolitan systems of New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and other cities, Ickes announced:

That he will ask the Civil Service Commission to conduct a special competitive examination for the National Capital Parks superintendency which would permit selection of one of the country's ranking men in metropolitan or municipal park work.

That an intensive study of the local park system will be made this year by two "dissinterested" experts.

While it is proposed to keep the National Capital Parks office a Federal agency, the plan is to consider its functions from a metropolitan standpoint and shape its program accordingly.

C. Marshall Finnan, parks superintendent since October, 1933, was transferred last month to the superintendency of Zion National Park, Utah.

The parks study will be made by Capt. Charles G. Sauers, general superintendent of the Cook County (Chicago) Forest Preserve District of Illinois, and H. G. Wagner, director-secretary of the Akron (Ohio) Metropolitan Park District, said Ickes' announcement.

They will come here this month to spend a few days observing conditions under the parks' peak load, returning in September to make a more detailed study.

They are expected to make recommendations as to whether the United States park police, now in the office of National Capital Parks, should be merged with the Metropolitan Police Department or allowed to go its separate way.

The variegated duties of the National Capital Parks office include the policing of the Mount Vernon Memorial highway, tree and flower culture, administration of several recreation centers and supervision of public golf links.

Assistant Superintendent Frank T. Gartside will continue as acting superintendent of the system pending the appointment of Finnan's successor.

Woman Jaywalker Goes to Jail for Disorderly Charge

Mildred Datton, who gave an address in the 2500 block Fourteenth street northwest Tuesday when she was arrested on charges of violating pedestrian control regulations, was in District Jail last night after being sentenced by Judge Hobart Newman in Police Court to serve 10 days or pay a $10 fine on a disorderly conduct charge.

Miss Datton's shout of "That's a lie!" to a policeman's testimony in Traffic Court yesterday and her charge that police use "cannibalistic tactics" did not aid her defense before Judge John P. McMahon, who found her guilty of jaywalking, but took her personal bond after a probation office investigation.

Trades Posts With Sister Rodriguez At Georgetown

Sister Mary Jane, O. S. F., well known to the older members of Georgetown University Hospital staff, has returned to service there after a ten-year absence, this time under appointment for a six-year term as superintendent.

Sister Jane succeeds Sister Rodriguez, on the staff for almost 40 years. Sister Jane was formerly superintendent of the St. Joseph's Hospital at Lancaster, Pa., where Sister Rodriguez succeeds her. The exchange of posts was announced yesterday by the Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University.

Sister Jane first served at the hospital from 1903 to 1914, joining the nursing staff a few years after the hospital was founded. Again from 1920 to 1930 she served the staff, leaving to go to Mount St. Mary's College and then to St. Joseph's Hospital at Reading, Pa., and later to St. Joseph's, at Lancaster.

Sister Rodriguez was one of the first sisters to become assoicated with Georgetown Hospital when it was founded in 1898. She was graduated in the first class of the hospital's School of Nursing, and subsequently promoted to various administrative offices. She became superintendent six years ago.

Chief Plumer Suspended 30 Days

Police Chief Eugene B. Plumer, of Mount Rainier, Md., yesterday was under a 30-day suspension after the Mayor and Town Council had found him guilty of charges he left his post without permission on three separate occasions.

Chief of the police in the suburban Maryland town for many years, Plumer gained considerable fame during the investigation of the four-year-old unsolved murder of Corinna Loring, pretty Mount Rainier Sunday school teacher.

Madame Butterfly's suicide, brought the vast audinece cheering to its feet.

Dr. Hans Kindler, conductor of the National Symphony Orchestra, who had returned to Washington for the performance, was beaming with delight at the intermission, and already making plans for more operatic performances next season.

He mentioned Tschaikowsky's "Midsummer Night's Dream" and two Gilbert and Sullivan operettas, "The Gondoliers" and "Pirates of Penzance," as possible productions, as well as Ibsen's "Peer Gynt," with music by Grieg, and "The Flying Dutchman," by Wagner. Dr. Kindler also suggested doing two or three condensed works by Gluck, and perhaps some ballets.

With mounting enthusiasm he listened to the admirable response of the players to the direction of Alexander Smallens, and at the close of the first act, his shout, "Bravo, Smallens," carried as well a message of congratulations to very member of the orchestra.

Havre de Grace Man Exhibits First and Second-Best Blooms

Mrs. Fielder's display was a bouquet of scarlet and salmon gladioli mixed with a white rose, several red and pink roses and two blooms of purple sage planked against a black plush background in a gold frame.

The winner also held ribbons in six other summer flower classes.

Arthur M. Reeves, of Havre de Grace, Md., scored 62 points winning the award for the best flower in the show and also for the second best bloom. He received the best-flower prize for his white "Myrna," with nine blooms and eight buds, the spike measuring 2½ feet.

A pale pink "Zoine" with a ruffled edge in deeper pink captured the ribbon for the third best-flower, exhibited by H. V. Wright, of Edgewood, Md.

Winning in nine classes other than gladioli exhibits, Mrs. Arthur P. Harrison, of Sligo Park Mills, Md., won 34 points, leading the club members participating.

The club's certificate of special recognition was awarded to Harold B. Higgins, of Easton, Md., for his display of hundreds of flowers from Glad Acres.

Howard W. Watkins, of Somerset, Md., and Freeman Weiss, president of the Woodridge Garden Club, were judges. Clarence W. Moore, president announced that the annual fruit, flower and vegetable show is scheduled for September 13 and 14 at the Takoma, D. C., library, where last night the show was held. The show will be open again from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. today.

Japan Reported Considering Envoys' Recall

Ambassadors Here, In Paris, London May Return, British Told

By International News Service

London, Aug. 2.—The British government has been informed that Japan is strongly considering the possibility of recalling its Ambassador to Washington, a high authority said tonight.

Simultaneously it was reported Britain received warning Tokyo would recall its ambassadors from London and Paris if the British and French governments abrogated their commercial treaties with Japan in a manner similar to the action taken last week by Secretary Hull in Washington.

[The Japanese government plans to summon Kensuke Horinouchi, its Ambassador in Washington, to Tokyo soon to give a detailed report on the denunciation by the United States of its trade treaty with Japan, the extreme nationalist newspaper Kokumin said today in Tokyo, the United Press reported.

[The newspaper said that after Horinouchi made his report, he and members of the government would discuss a new policy toward the United States.—Editor's note.]

The threat of new crises in the Far East and Japan's warning moves were reported as the British House of Commons was told by Prime Minister Chamberlain that the government had lodged a sharp new protest with Tokyo over anti-British agitation in China.

Break in Talks Threatened

Japanese Foreign Minister Arita is said to have disclosed the possibility of Japan recalling her Ambassador to Washington in conversations with Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador to Tokyo. Arita, it was learned, has turned a cold shoulder to previous British protests against violation of British interests in China.

(A Tokyo dispatch said Craigie had threatened to break off the current Tokyo negotiations on the Japanese-British dispute at Tientsin unless Japan puts the anti-British movement under control.)

Meanwhile, Eugene H. Dooman, United States charge d'affairs in Tokyo, firmly protested against maltreatment of American citizens by Japanese soldiers in China.

Dooman delivered his representations during an hour's interview with Seijiro Yoshizawa, chief of the Japanese Foreign Office American section. He was reported to have told Yoshizawa that Japanese-inspired anti-British agitation in China is turning into a general movement against the entire white race in the Far East, thus endangering Americans.

The protests of Sir Robert and Dooman were said in London to have been the result of consultations between London and Washington.

London, U. S. Consult

Should diplomatic exchanges become increasingly unsatisfactory between London and Washington on the one hand and Tokyo on the other, it was believed in the British capital that the United States might consider sending a battleship squadron to Singapore, where it could be based with British and Australian units as a warning to Japan.

The closest possible contact was being maintained with the United States and France on the Far Eastern developments, Chamberlain told the House.

Chamberlain confirmed in Commons the reports that Craigie had been instructed to lodge "a further vigorous protest" against mistreatment of Britons in China.

It was clearly indicated Sir Robert plans to reiterate his statement that a continuation of the anti-British campaign would make "most difficult" the Anglo-Japanese talks now proceeding with an eye toward settlement of their disputes in China.

Craigie will point out that such unending agitation is an indication that either Japan cannot maintain order in North China or is not fulfilling its obligations as agreed between the two countries.

Business and Blockade

Tientsin, August 2.—American businessmen in Tientsin unanimously repudiated a statement in the Japanese-controlled Peking Chronicle, that Americans were suffering very little because of the Japanese blockade of the Tientsin British and French concessions.

The Americans cited facts and figures to prove that they faced severe handicaps under the prevailing business conditions.

Exports from Tientsin to the United States in 1937, prior to restrictions imposed by the Japanese, totaled $23,000,000, but amounted last year to only $9,000,000. Fur exports to the United States the first half of this year totaled $1,466,000, compared with approximately $5,000,000 and $7,000,000 for the two preceding normal years.

Blockade to Be Lifted

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 3 (U.P.). The Japanese navy spokesman said today the blockade of the Pearl River on the southeast China coast would be lifted soon.

Axis Alliance Weighed

Tokyo (Thursday), Aug. 3 (AP).—Activity in governmental quarters today indicated that the question of an outright military alliance with Italy and Germany again was being brought to the fore.

It was learned authoritatively that a conference of five key ministers of the cabinet had been summoned, following a meeting last night of high-ranking army officers.

Offer Reported Of Slovakia To Hungary

Germany Could Put Troops on Magyar Soil In Return, Says Paper

By the United Press

Paris, Aug. 2.—Germany was reported in French newspaper dispatches today to have offered to surrender her protectorate of Slovakia to Hungary if German troops were allowed to take up strategic positions on Hungarian soil along the route of Fuehrer Hitler's "drive to the east."

Reporting the alleged offer, the newspaper L'Ordre said it was a part of Hitler's plan to encircle Poland and force the latter's capitulation before the Western powers are able to aid the Poles.

Newspapers suggested that, in view of the firm Anglo-French stand on the side of Poland, Hitler might try a "diversion move" against Rumania, using Hungary as his auxiliary. This speculation was heightened by recurring Hungarian-Rumanian border clashes during the last four days.

Reports that German troops are moving up close to the Polish frontier in several sectors came from various capitals.

Slovakia, which Hungary would like to possess, was carved out of Czecho-Slovakia after the Nazi absorption of the post-war republic last March. It lies along Poland's southern frontier.

L'Ordre said the British government had learned of the purported German offer to Hungary.

An open attack in Budapest today by Count Stefan Csaky, Hungarian foreign minister, on Slovakia was regarded by some diplomatic observers as possibly having a close bearing on Hitler's maneuvering. He recently asserted Hungary was determined to cooperate closely with the Rome-Berlin axis.

Rumania feels herself menaced by Hungary, from whom she obtained Transylvania after the World War, and there has been considerable suspicion that Germany is the agitating force behind the scenes in the new Hungarian-Rumanian frontier incidents.

Schwellenbach Urges Arms Ban on Japan

Wants Administration To Ask Exporters for Immediate Embargo

Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, urged yesterday that the Administration, in the name of "morality," ask United States exporters to halt all shipments of war materials to Japan immediately.

In a Senate speech, he said that while it would be six months before the United States' trade treaty with Japan would terminate under a proclamation issued by Secretary of State Hull, there should be no time wasted in severing all trade relationships with Japan, as a retaliation for her "ruthless and frightful campaign of conquest" in China.

An informal appeal to American shippers by Hull, he said, would result in an immediate slackening of trade with the Nipponese.

"From the sense of morality," Schwellenbach said, "the American people demand this action." He added:

Were it not for the assistance of the United States, Japan's Chinese campaign would probably have collapsed many months ago.

"Japan is a nation without the necessary materials of war. The whole purpose of her Chinese conquest is to acquire territory from which she may secure resources for further extension of war. We speak of her as having Germany and Italy as her allies. The fact is that we are her most important ally."

Sumner Welles, Acting Secretary of State, said meanwhile that the United States had made a blanket protest to Japan over a number of recent American-Japanese incidents in China.

The incidents involved seven Americans, including six missionaries and a naval warrant officer.

Welles said American representatives in China and the Far East have had standing instructions to take up matters with Japanese authorities when they occur and to report to the department after they have made representations. In other cases, he added, specific instructions are sent them.

Quiz on Linking Guffey to Oil Deals Is Killed

Committee Reports Adversely on Inquiry Into Mexican Seizures

By the Associated Press

With Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, taking the lead, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee killed yesterday two resolutions for an investigation of circumstances surrounding the seizure of American oil property by the Mexican government.

The committee decided unanimously, on Borah's motion, that neither of the resolutions was properly before it and that no facts were stated in either which justified an investigation by a special three-member committee, as suggested. It then voted to report both bills adversely.

The resolutions were introduced as the outgrowth of the action by Senator Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, in reading to the Senate last week newspaper reports linking the name of Senator Guffey (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, with persons who negotiated the sale of oil by Mexico from the seized properties.

Bridges, who asked in one of the resolutions for an investigation of negotiations carried on for the sale or barter of the oil, said he might renew his proposal at the next session of Congress.

Cites "Plenty of Pressure"

The New Hampshire Senator, who is not a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, told reporters that he understood there had been "plenty of pressure from various sources" to block any investigation.

Guffey left the committee room when the Bridges resolution and a similar measure by Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, were taken up. Having asserted in the Senate last week that the stories read by Bridges were "100 per cent false" as far as he was concerned, Guffey was reported to have told the committee that he was neither urging nor opposing an investigation.

Senator Borah said it was his thought in moving to report the resolutions adversely that if they were to be considered at all they should have been sent to the Senate Privileges and Elections Committee and not to the Foreign Relations Committee.

Both resolutions cited the newspaper stories but neither made any charges. Guffey's name was not mentioned in either.

Talks to Continue

Donald R. Richberg, attorney for major United States oil companies, said tonight a "rather difficult situation" had arisen in negotiations over settlement for Mexican expropriation of American-owned oil lands last year.

Both Richberg and Mexican Ambassador Francisco Castillo Majera said, however, the negotiations would be continued next week.

They conferred late this afternoon at the Mexican Embassy for about two hours, shortly after Richberg had spent an hour at the State Department with Acting Secretary Sumner Welles.

Both the envoy and Richberg said they had agreed to communicate with their respective parties.

Germany Commemorates the World War By Demonstration She's Ready to Fight Another

By the United Press.

Berlin, Aug. 2.—Germany is prepared to strike "with lightning speed and undreamed-of force" if she is driven to war again, the army, navy and air force were told today in proclamations marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of Germany's entry into the World War.

The proclamations were issued by Marshal Goering, commander-in-chief of the air force; Admiral Eric Raeder, commander-in-chief of the Navy, and Col. Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, army leader, as the Reich's 2,000,000 men under arms observed a nation-wide holiday.

Meanwhile, the air force which Goering built to what he contends is the greatest aerial strength possessed by any nation, carried out large-scale maneuvers over northwestern Germany across 15,000 square miles of territory.

The maneuvers, described officially as having revealed "an enormous degree of efficiency," were in the form of an imaginary war between an invading "Blue" force and its defeat by a "Red" force east of the River Elbe.

Between the two aerial forces, bounded by the rivers Wesser and Elge, is a neutral "Green" state whose neutrality thus far has been respected by both combatants in the maneuvers to continue until Thursday. A Neutral Yellow State" in Schleswig-Holstein, however, was flown over by the defending "Red" forces and as result the "Blue" planes also flew over it.

It was announced that antiaircraft guns had downed, theoretically, large numbers of the "Enemy" planes.

Today's anniversary was celebrated in cities, towns and villages and at garrisons with parades, tattoos, and band concerts. The orders for the celebrations came directly from Fuehrer Hitler.

While the proclamations to the army, navy and air force bitterly denounced the attempts of the western powers to "encircle" the Reich, the newspaper Lokalanzeiger attacked President Roosevelt for what it called his "impertinent arrogance."

Hitler 'Magnetic' To 3 Tap Dancers

London, Aug. 2 (AP).—Three English girls who tap danced before Adolf Hitler in the Berlin Wintergarten returned home today with praise of the Fuehrer's "marvelous eyes, dynamic personality and magnetic attraction for women."

The girls were Marjorie Ascot, 17; Rosy Nuth, 18, and Mona Baldwin, 19. Marjorie, the spokesman, said "Hitler did not sit still for a second. He was talking to people on either side of him and pointing to the stage. His hands were never still."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Leonard Beats Browns for Nats, 2 to 1

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

When he sold his son-in-law for a quarter of a million dollars five years ago Clark Griffith's reputation as baseball's David Harum zoomed to a peak. He not only collected baseball's highest purchase price for an infielder with a broken wrist, but he arranged for steady employment for at least five years for his adopted daughter's husband as player-manager of the Red Sox. The Joe Cronin deal was a whopper.

POVICH

Since 1934, however, Mr. Griffith has failed to distinguish himself as a baseball trader. He traded Jake Powell for Ben Chapman and it was a negative stand-off. He exchanged Bump Hadley for Jimmy DeShong and neither the Nats nor the Yankees were harmed or helped. He sent Buck Newsom and Ben Chapman along to the Red Sox in exchange for the Ferrell freres and Mel Almada and profited not at all, neither did he suffer.

Two years ago he claimed Al Simmons from the Tigers at the waiver price of $7,500, and that's what Simmons was, a $7,500 ball player. Last winter he unloaded Simmons to the Bees for $3,000, a fair price. He may have taken a beating on last year's Joe Kuhel-Zeke Bonura deal, but it was not a notable defeat. Kuhel is playing grand ball for the White Sox and Bonura has since been waived out of the American League, but Mr. Griffith has $25,000 cash to assuage his grief at losing Kuhel.

He took a $20,000 licking on the Jimmy Wasdell deal with Minneapolis three years ago when he gave up Outfielder Carl Reynolds and Infielder Red Kress in addition to a bundle of cash for Wasdell, who quickly began to prove that he was no major league first baseman.

Maybe Jimmy Will Do, After All

But there is now a new angle to the Wasdell story. Wasdell may not be a first baseman, but there is evidence that he will make the grade a san outfielder. He is something of a sensation at Minneapolis where he is now playing with strings attached by the Nats who next spring will jerk him back to Florida for another tryout. To hear George Barton, of the Minneapolis Tribune tell it:

"Clark Griffith, owner of the Washington American League club, did a big favor for his old friend, Mike Kelley, by optioning Jimmy Wasdell to Minneapolis for the remainder of the season.

"It's a favor that will pay large dividends to Griffith at the close of the season for we happen to know that Kelley will show his appreciation in a substantial manner. Kelley and Manager Shehan badly needed a player of Wasdell's ability when Zeke Trent failed to come up to expectations as a hitter and aggressive ball player.

"Wasdell has plenty of power at the plate, is a reliable hitter in the clutches, is fast on the bases and can do an equally fine job either in the outfield or first base. Jimmy's value as a hitter has been demonstrated in a big way as he is batting around .330 and has driven in more than 50 runs during the two months he has been with Minneapolis.

"In addition to his mechanical ability, Wasdell is endowed with a wealth of baseball sense and is chock full of fight as a pit bulldog."

All of which, if true, may assert itself next year and salvage for Griffith some of the lost luster of his reputation as a dealer in baseball flesh.

Leonard Deal Is Griff's Pride

But there has been one deal in the past three years that the old gentleman can point to with pride. It required only a $6,000 outlay but it fetched him one of the greatest pitching bargains of recent years. We mean Dutch Leonard, of course.

The Dutchman, back in 1937, was laboring in the Southern League for Atlanta. He was winning more than his share of ball games, but he was in some disrepute as a major league prospect because he had been tried and apparently found wanting by the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Seemingly he was forgotten as a prospective big leaguer by everybody except Clark Griffith. The Nats' owner had seen Leonard pitch against the Nats in a Spring exhibition game with the Dodgers several years ago and on that day he was virtually unhittable. Despite Leonard's failures with the Dodgers, that one game he pitched against Washington stuck in Griffith's craw.

For two years Griffith tried to draft Leonard from Atlanta without success. That was in the fall of 1935 and 1936. The Athletics, by reason of finishing lower in the standings than the Nats, had first choice, and they always drafted an Atlanta player. Because no more than one player on a given club could be drafted in any season, Leonard was unavailable to the Nats.

Atlanta Pinned Hopes on "Dutch"

What the Athletics actually were doing was covering up Leonard for the Atlanta Club which hoped to keep him and win a pennant. They drafted Harry Kelley in 1936 and Bud Thomas in 1937, not with much idea of helping themselves but in an attempt to protect Atlanta from the loss of Leonard. That Kelley did prove a winner for the A's was greatly to their surprise.

In December of 1937, Griffith conferred with Connie Mack before the minor league draft lists were submitted. Mack confessed that his first choice from the minors would not be an Atlanta player and Griffith thus put in a claim for Leonard.

He didn't know much about Leonard except that he used to throw a knuckle ball and that he had been a consistent winner in the Southern Association. He asked Leonard about his knuckler and immodestly, perhaps, big Dutch declared that he had received a dirty deal at Brooklyn; that Brooklyn catchers wouldn't call for his knuckle ball which was tough to receive inasmuch as Leonard himself didn't known which way it might break.

Griffith assured Leonard that the Washington catchers would call for his knuckle ball and added an ominous "or else." It has worked out pretty nicely. Leonard's four-hit affair against the Browns yesterday was his eleventh win of the season against four defeats with a sixth-place club. And he's the only pitcher in a half dozen years to beat the Yankees three straight times. Dutch Leonard is the best thing that has happened to Clark Griffith for a long time.

Dutch Hurls 5 Innings With No Hits

Case and Giuliani Score With Triple and Double; Seven Hits Are Wasted

By Al Hailey

Dutch Leonard held the St. Louis Browns hitless until the sixth inning yesterday at Griffith Stadium, personally handed them a run in the seventh and finally was rewarded with a 2-to-1 victory for the Nats—his eleventh this season.

The big right-hand knuckleball artist allowed the Browns only four hits—one in each of the last four innings—but he almost spoiled his own performance by wild throws to first and second base.

And while the Nats unleashed a nine-hit attack on Jack Kramer, the Browns' early season rookie pitching sensation, they had to call on a pair of sacrifice flies to the outfield for their scoring punch.

Case Gets Triple

Six Nats had been left standing on base watching their mates make the final outs when George Case led off in the fifth with a powerful triple that bounced against the left-field bleachers wall after sailing over the head of Myril Hoag, who badly misjudged the fly and ran in under it.

Buddy Lewis, next man up, sacrificed with a looping fly to Right-fielder Billy Sullivan, and Case romped home to give the Nats a 1-run margin.

But the Nats were in a precarious position, and Leonard was no help when in the first half of the seventh he allowed Joe Grace the only walk of the game.

Then, with two men out, Dutch threw a wrench in the works by taking Johnny Berardino's slow-rolling grounder and making a careless throw to first. The ball sailed over lanky Jimmy Vernon's head, bounced off the box seats into right-field. Grace, rounding second on the hit, came home for the free run that tied the game.

Giuliani Scores

Angelo Giuliani led off the Nats' half of the seventh with a smashing double over shortstop, then went to third on Leonard's sacrifice and came home when Case lifted a long fly to leftfield.

It was the final run and all the Nats needed, but Leonard furnished another scare in the ninth. Grace was on first by virtue of a single to centerfield when Catcher Joe Glenn sent a sacrifice bunt rolling toward pitcher's box.

Dutch fielded the ball, whirled for a try for a double out but threw the ball over the head of Shortstop Cecil Travis, who had rushed in to cover second. Grace was safe at second and Glenn was on first with only one man out. Calmly, Dutch forced Bernardino to pop to center and redeemed himself with a final bit of fielding when he gathered in Pinch Hitter Chet Lobb's bobble to pitcher's box and cautiously threw to Vernon for the third out.

Vernon Also Fumbles

Leonard, however, was not the only fumbler for the Nats. Vernon took Jimmy Bloodworth's toss in the first play of the game and dropped it as Don Heffner crossed the bag. Then in the third inning Lewis juggled and stumbled over an easy grounder hit by Kramer, who went to second on a passed ball by Giuliani. The Browns were able to capitalize only on Leonard's wild throw, though.

Bloodworth had a perfect day at bat for the Nats. He obtained a pair of doubles—one against the right-field fence in the second inning—and a single for three times at bat. Lewis and Wright also enjoyed their turns at bat—each getting two singles out of four appearances.

Play Errorless Ball

In contrast to the Nats, the Browns shone in the field with an errorless performance. Centerfielder Grace made two desperate running catches in the second inning—the first an over-the-shoulder stab of Case's long drive to the bleacher wall. Later, with two men on, he turned on a surprising burst of speed to come in just in time to stop Travis' short fly to center.

What started as another scoring threat in the sixth, when Bloodworth went to first on a single to left field, ended when Vernon hit into a double play to Second Baseman Berardino.

Backed against the right-field fence in the eighth inning, Case

First Defeat In 13 Starts For Rookie

Young Hurler Batted From Box in Fifth; Schoolboy Rowe Wins for Detroit

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 2.—Disaster caught up with Rookie Atley Donald today, handing him his first defeat instead of his thirteenth victory as the bloodthirsty Detroit Tigers stopped the Yankees again, 7-to-2.

Donald was batted out of the box in Detroit recently but escaped responsibility for the loss. Today the Tigers tore into his offerings for seven hits and six runs before bringing about his removal for a pinch-hitter in the fifth.

Detroit's heavy artillery was supported by the seven hit pitching of Schoolboy Rowe, who showed flashes of his finest form. He was ahead of nearly every batter and struck out three in the seventh inning.

They added three more runs in the second on a single, a double, a single, two passes (filling the bases) and McCoy's hot grounder which Joe Gordon stopped but threw wildly.

Donald's control was bad in contrast to Rowe and with two out in the fifth he walked Hank Greenberg, Piggy Higgins doubled and Pete Fox brought both home with a single. Detroit's other run was scored off Spud Chandler in the seventh on a walk, a single and a double play.

The "13" jinx also snared Joe Di Maggio, who went hitless after a 12 game streak. The Yankees' first run was Bill Dickey's sixteenth homer in the second and the other came in the fifth on Charley Keller's sacrifice fly with the bases filled.

Alice Marble, Mrs. Fabyan Score Easily

Wimbledon Champs Gain Third Round At East Hampton

By the Associated Press

East Hampton, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Singles competition in the Invitation Women's Tennis Tournament at the Maidstone Club was held up today to give the doubles field, headed by the National and Wimbledon champions, Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, a chance to catch up.

Miss Marble and Mrs. Fabyan, who drew a first-round bye, led the way into the third round with an easy 6—1, 6—2 victory over Louise Raymond, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and Patricia Cumming, of Westfield, N. J. Miss Marble, who won two singles tilts with the loss of only two games in four sets yesterday, continued her perfect playing form through the doubles competition.

Team play generally followed form, although Helen Bernhard, of New York, 17-year-old singles winner of last week's Seabright tournament, went to the sidelines with her partner, Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles. They were eliminated by the California team of Patricia Canning and Virginia Wolfenden, 6—4, 2—6, 6—2.

The only other match extended to three sets saw the highly regarded pair of Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, and former National Champion Helen Jacobs trounce Mrs. Virginia Rice Johnson, Chestnut Hill, Mass., and Mary Arnold, Los Angeles, 6—4, 3—6, 8—6.

Another well-regarded California pair, Dorothy Bundy and Dorothy Workman, overcame late opposition to down Catharine Malcolm, Los Angeles, and Helen Pedersen, Stamford, Conn, 6—1, 10—8.

Sidney Wood, Joe Hunt Beaten In Southhampton Doubles Play

McNeill-Parker Duo Gains Round of Eight; Gene Mako, Gardnar Mulloyy Also Advance

By the Associated Press.

Southhampton, N. Y., Aug. 2.—Norman Bickel and Marvin Wachman, two Chicagoans who never before had played doubles together, today supplied unexpected fireworks to the forty-ninth annual Meadow Club invitation tournament when they captured a first-round match from Joe Hunt, of San Francisco, and Sidney Wood, of New York, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2.

Wood and Hunt, the tourney's top-seeded tandem and ranked No. 3 nationally, were outplayed by the pick-up duo after the first set. Bickel's service all but punched holes through the losers' racquets and Wachman's ground-stroking forced Wood and Hunt into extended rallies, invariably to their disadvantage. Later, Bickel and Wachman downed Ladislav Hecht, of Czecho-Slovakia, and J. Gilbert Hall, of New York, 9—7, 5—7, 6—1, to reach the quarter-finals.

Another newly formed combination, with possible Davis Cup significance, was that of Gene Mako, Los Angeles, and Gardnar Mulloy, Miami, who defeated Walter Mes-

Solters Sold To St. Louis By Cleveland

Veteran Outfielder To Join Former Mates Here This Afternoon

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 2.—The Cleveland Baseball Club tonight announced the sale of Outfielder Julius "Moose" Solters to the St. Louis Browns at a waiver price of $7,500.

The veteran is expected to return to his former team tomorrow at Washington. He was obtained by the Indians from St. Louis in a six-player trade in 1937.

Solters had been serving mostly as a pinch hitter this season and his current batting average is .275. With Outfielder Joe Gallagher, of the Browns, on the sidelines because of injuries, Solters probably will go into active duty for the Browns.

The sale leaves Cleveland with four outfielders: Bruce Campbell, Ben Chapman, Jeff Heath and Roy Weatherly.

Gov. O'Conor May Compete as Regatta Mechanic

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 2 (AP).—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor disclosed today he might compete as a mechanic in one of the speed boat races at this week-end's Miles River Yacht Club Regatta.

The executive said Andy Crawford, Washington, D. C., racer, invited him to ride in Crawford's Edandy, fast 135-cubic-inch hydroplane, and that "if I can work things around, I'll accept."

Belgian King Qualifies in Amateur Golf

Le Zoute, Belgium, Aug. 2 (AP).—King Leopold of the Belgians posted an 81 today to qualify for the Belgian amateur golf championship on the par 73 Lekkerbeck links.

His majesty's score equaled that turned in by Maj. Gen. A. C. Critchley, of Enland, the defending titlist. It was beaten by only seven others. The King kept the fact he intended to play a secret, entering under the name of "A. N. Other."

P. J. Clive led the qualifiers with a 77.

Tribe Beats Red Sox, 8-2, Then Loses, 5-4

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 2.—The Boston Red Sox kept alive their flickering pennant hopes today by pushing across two runs in the eighth for a 5-to-4 victory over Cleveland in the nightcap of a double-header, after Boston lost the first game, 8 to 2.

The Sox trailed, 4-1, going into the last of the sixth of the second game, but closed in on the Indians when singles by Cronin, Vosmik and Lou Finney and a walk to Williams produced two runs.

Willis Hudlin was driven out of action in the eighth, and Harry Eisenstat, who relieved, was wild and walked Williams and Vosmik to fill the bases.

This set the stage for Tommy Carey, pinch-hitting for Johnny Peacock, to come through with a scratch single to First Baseman Oscar Grimes, and Williams scored what proved to be the winning run.

Woody Rich started for Boston,

Gil Hunt Sought For Mid-Atlantic Tennis Tourney

A telegram was sent Gilbert Hunt, asking him to return to Washington to enter the Middle Atlantic States tennis championships, starting Saturday at 1 p. m., at Edgemoor Club, Dooley Mitchell, president of the club, announced. Deadline for entries is today at 6 p. m.

With Barney Welsh already entered in the tourney, committee officials are building hopes for a rousing possible final meeting btween Hunt and Welsh. Leading Washington net stars will compete, including Davey Johnsen, city champion; Hugh Lynch, former city champion; Dick Murphy, C. Alphonso Smith, Tom Mangan, Allie Ritzenberg and others.

Rumors Fly That Medwick Will Be Traded

St. Louis, Aug. 2 (AP).—A temperamental outburst by Joe Medwick when he was removed from the Cardinal lineup for the third straight time, gave support tonight to reports that the outfielder was at odds with Manager Ray Blades.

MEDWICK

It was the ninth inning yesterday, there was a runner on first, two men were out, and the Cardinals were leading Boston, 4 to 3. The count on Tony Cuccinello, a long hitter, was 2 and 1.

Suddenly time was called and Lynn King, a speedy youngster, dashed out into left field to replace Medwick.

Medwick promptly threw his glove high into the air, stalked belligerently after it and kicked it viciously before picking it up. He left the field by a wagon-gate near the leftfield line just as Cuccinello ended the game by striking out.

The fiery display by the outfielder indicated there was substance to the shadows in the repeated talk that he was not satisfied and would be traded. Medwick, the National League's "most valuable player" in 1937, has been the Cardinal regular left-fielder since 1932.

Quist Isn't Worried Anymore About Keeping Feet on Ground

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 2.—Adrian Quist, dapper little Australian Davis Cup player, isn't worried any more about how to keep both feet on the ground while serving—his bane in last fall's crucial match with Don Budge.

QUIST

Here with his fellow countryman, Jack Crawford, for a visit and informal practice match on the Germantown Cricket Club turf, Quist disclosed he has been working for months on a new serve.

"I have been practicing with my foot solidly on the ground to conform with the American interpretation of the service rule," he said. "I now believe I can serve without violating the foot-fault rule."

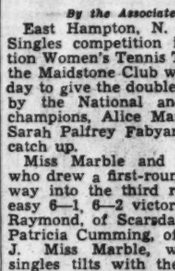
Quist now stands about 6 inches in back of the baseline and does not hop off the ground with both feet as he serves.

In the Davis Cup matches here last year, so many foot-faults were called on Quist that he had to revise his service and he lost some of his hitting power.

Quist and Crawford left today for Rumson, N. J., to await the arrival of Acting Capt. Harry Hopman and Jack Bromwich before starting practice at Seabright for the North American zone final with Cuba August 10, 11 and 12.

Trustees Name Dorothy Comiskey Chisox Treasurer

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Miss Dorothy Comiskey, 22, who inherited from her father and grandfather an interest in major league baseball, became treasurer of the Chicago White Sox today.



COMISKEY

Her election was announced by the First National Bank, trustee of the estate of her father, J. Louis Comiskey, who was president of the American League club.

One of the youngest women to hold an executive position in baseball, she qualified for the job as the result of several years work in the White Sox office following her graduation from Northwestern University.

Dorothy, the eldest of three children, also had her mother's approval. Mrs. Comiskey, Dorothy, Grace, 18, and Charles 13, inherited 7,450 of the 7,500 shares of White Sox stock.

This IS the End!

New Philadelphia, Ohio, Aug. 2. (AP).—A pair of New Philadelphia teams, the Marathoners and the Borden Dairies, tonight claimed a marathon softball record of 1,224 innings, played between 4:45 a. m. and 8:15 p. m.

The players were fed as they awaited turns at bat. The Dairies won, 42-to-40.

Lohrman Beats Reds for Third Time as Giants Win, 12-2

Hurler Leads Attack With Three Hits

Giants Win Fourth Straight With 17 Hit Attack on Thompson and Davis

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 2.—The New York Giants humbled Cincinnati's National League leaders again today, 12 to 2, on the five hit pitching of young Bill Lohrman, who also had beaten the Reds in his last two starts against them.

Besides subduing the rampant Reds with his hurling, Lohrman participated in the 17-hit attack on three opposing pitchers with a double and two singles, batting in four runs.

Every player in the New York line-up hit safely and working together they bunched two big innings off Gene Thompson before he was replaced by Ray (Peaches) Davis in the sixth.

In the second stanza two singles and two doubles brought three runs and in the sixth the Giants put together six more hits, including a single by Lohrman with the bases loaded, for six runs.

They scored in the fourth on a walk, an infield out and a single, in the seventh on Tom Hafey's homer and in the eighth on Zeke Bonura's triple and a passed ball.

Lohrman had a shutout for six innings, but Frank McCormick, making up for a wild throw he made during one Giant spree, got three hits—one of them a double in the seventh when he scored on Tony Bongiovanni's single and another his seventeenth home run in the ninth.

Pirates Win Shutout From Dodgers, 6-0

End 1st Division Hopes of Brooklyn; Bowman Gives 5 Hits

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 2.—The Pirates set a heavy foot down on the Brooklyn Dodgers' hopes of getting into the first division today with a 6-to-0 shutout on Joe Bowman's clever five-hit hurling.

The Buccaneers, led by Chuck Klein and Arky Vaughan, chased Luke Hamlin in less than three innings and scored another run off Relief Pitcher Vito Tamulis.

Vaughan got three hits driving in a run in the first with a triple and another in a four-run third chapter on a single. Klein homered with one on in this inning and brought another tally across with a sacrifice fly in the eighth.

Jimmy Dykes Offered Two More Years as Chisox Pilot

White Sox Manager Says He'll Sign Papers in Chicago

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Chunky Jimmy Dykes, under whose leadership the Chicago White Sox changed from a second-division club to a battling first division team in the American League, was offered a new contract through 1940 and 1941 today.

John C. Mechem, vice president of the First National Bank, trustee of the estate of the late White Sox owner, J. Louis Comiskey, informed Dykes of the contract offer and at Philadelphia the rotund pilot said: "I suppose I'll sign when I get back to Chicago. I like the job and I like the players. We've done pretty well this season, all things considered, and while I won't predict a pennant—watch us next year."

Mrs. Jewell and Mrs. Pratt Deadlock in Argyle Invitation

Winners Tie With Scores Of 98-24, 74

65 Compete in Play For 20 Prizes; Mrs. M. A. Miller Posts Second Net

The Argyle Women's Golf Committee's Invitation event for the high handicap players of the District Association players ended in a net and gross tie yesterday, with Mrs. R. C. Jewell, of the host club, and Mrs. Henry Pratt, Washington, posting identical scores.

Mrs. Jewel, low net winner in one of the newspaper tourneys this year, and Mrs. Pratt each played the course in 98 strokes and deducted 24 handicaps for net 74s. They divided the low gross and low net prizes.

A field of 65 with handicaps of 18 and over competed in the event, the second half of the first tournament ever conducted by the women's golf committee of the Silver Spring club. The low handicap players competed last week, and the total entry was well over the 100 mark. The club is hopeful of securing one of the regular scheduled events of the District Women's Golf Association next year.

Scores Net 75

Mrs. M. A. Miller, Kenwood, was one of the two other 100-breakers in the field, scoring a 99, minus a 24 handicap for a net 75. Mrs. George Jani, Congressional, won third low net with 110-33, 77, while three tied at 78's, Mrs. Floyd Beasley, Manor, 108-30, 78; Mrs. John Bachman, Indian Spring, with a like score, and Mrs. R. E. Burks, Congressional, 99-21, 78. Mrs. A. D. Kane, Kenwood, 105-26, 79, was the other score under the net 80 mark.

Twenty prizes were given in all, other winners including Mrs. R. J. Lillibridge, Argyle, 105-24, 81; Mrs. H. H. Hughes, Kenwood, 100-17, 81; Mrs. Phelps Adams, Washington, 107-25, 82; and C. E. McGowan, Manor, 104-22, 82.

Ties in the 83 bracket were Mrs. R. L. Hutchison, Washington, 109-26, 83; Mrs. P. H. Salavan, Indian Spring, 113-30, 83; Mrs. Pat Winkler, Congressional, 11-28, 83; Mrs. Albert Haas, Beaver Dam, 11-29, 83; Mrs. H. O. Porter, Indian Spring, 104-21, 83; Mrs. Lloyd Dennis, Washington, 116-33, 83, and Mrs. T. J. Beech, Manor, 108-25, 83.

Prizes were presented by the host club chairman, Mrs. Edward Widmayer, and Mrs. Albert LaBonte, of the committee, while Mrs. Robert A. Lacey, president of the District Women's Golf Association, assisted in posting the scores.

Invitation Event At Capital Tuesday

Mrs. Edward Fox, chairman of the women's golf committee at Capital Club, announced an invitation tourney for the District women golfers next Tuesday on the Glen Echo layout.

No entries will be taken, but players will leave the tee in threesomes starting at 8:45, upon appearance. A small entrance fee will take care of the prizes, plus a dozen golf balls donated by Pro Tony Sylvester.

Ryan Insists Singh Use Cobra Clutch Freely Tonight

RYAN

Rosy Red yesterday penned an invitation to Nanjo to feel free to use his clutch at will, reminding that his neck is some 18 inches around and something on the order of a telegraph pole.

"I personally will retaliate with a dropkick for every attempt of this fellow to clamp his so-called 'cobra' hold on me," Ryan said contemptuously yesterday.

"Furthermore, phooey to Mr. Nanjo Singh," Rosy Red added. "I have copied the well know weapon of Dynamite Joe Savoldi and now can deliver a dangerous drop kick." To complete the night of terror, Bibber McCoy will meet Hank Metheny, Rudy Strongberg meets Tom Mahoney, and George Kondylis meets Chief Chewaki.

Sooter Has 6 in 6

Jerry Sooter pounded out six hits, five of them doubles, in six times at bat yesterday as the Chevy Chase Terrors swamped Industrial Home School on its own lot, 16-7. Phil Donaldson was the winning pitcher.

Three Changes In Amateur Golf Line-up

Bogart, Shea, Hufty Unable to Play; Meyer May Be Out

Three and possibly four changes in the starting line-up of the District's all-star amateur golf team will meet Baltimore's 16 best simonpures Sunday at Manor were announced yesterday by Team Capt. Roger Peacock.

Vacations will rob the team of three of the top players, a pair of youngsters, Ralph Bogart, Indian Spring, and Billy Shea, Congressional, plus Page Hufty, the Chevy Chase Club champion. Dick Meyer, the Baltimore Invitation finalist from the host club, may be unable to play, due to an eye infection.

Peacock will use the alternates named by the local golf writers, Louis Fuchs, Indian Spring; Johnny Bergelin, Kenwood, and Tommy Bones, southpaw ace at Manor, while the fourth alternate, Billy Dettweiler, Congressional, is also a doubtful starter.

Gene Pittman, one of Congressional's top amateurs who is playing the best golf in the club at present, was named to the squad and will probably fit into the line-up as a starting player.

Despite the changes the team will be a heavy favorite to score another victory over the visitors, although the 17-7 margin of last year may be cut. Bobby Brownell, Claude Rippy, Peacock, Volney Burnett, Earle Skinker, Jerry Hart, Buddy Sharkey, Earl McAleer, Martin McCarthy, Parker Nolan, George Molloy and Billy Houghton have been playing at least twice a week during the summer, a few of them more.

Murphy to Officiate At Sandlot Opening

Attorney General Frank Murphy yesterday accepted an invitation to throw out the first ball and take part in pre-game ceremonies opening the National Federation of Amateur Baseball championship playoff September 9 at Griffith Stadium.

About 30 sandlot teams from throughout the Nation will compete in the playoff. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, of Maryland, will participate in ceremonies at the game September 10, when the Maryland champions play. The Washington champions will compete in a doubleheader the opening day.

Final championship game will be played September 17 as part of a doubleheader. The Detroit Tigers and Nationals play the second game in observance of Johnny Stone Day.

Lucky Teter Makes Farewell Stand at Speedway Tonight

"LUCKY" TETER

Lucky Teter and his automobile and motorcycle stunting Hell Drivers came back to Washington early today for tonight's farewell appearance at Capitol Speedway, New York avenue near Bladensburg road. The program of at least 28 daredevil feats will start at 8:30 under the arc lights of the fifth-mile track.

The Hell Drivers came here last night from Lewistown, Pa., where they appeared at the Mifflin County Fair, an annual stop on the Hell Driver schedule. After tonight's show at Capitol Speedway, the caravan of $100,000 worth of stock automobiles and equipment will leave immediately for Lewistown, where the daredevils are scheduled to appear again tomorrow night.

Inviting disaster more recklessly than he has ever before dared, Lucky will send his stock automobiles through a terrific pace tonight as he seeks a long string of world records to add to his fast-growing list.

Because of the peculiarities of the small track, Lucky has prepared himself for a physical beating, as he man-handles his automobiles as they speed around the course sliding crazily from side to side, plunging through blazing timber barriers, hurtling over the top of other cars and somersaulting end-over-end and side-over-side.

Defiabaugh Sisters Score in Regatta

Francis Finishes First, Irene Second And Betty Third at Cambridge; Muncie Wins Class A Outboard Event

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Md., Aug. 2.—The three Defiabaugh sisters from Woodside, Del., scooted their midget class outboards 'round and 'round the 4-mile course of the Cambridge Yacht Club today to take all prizes in that event.

Frances Defiabaugh ran her Double Trouble at 28.57 miles per hour over the pond-calm Choptank River course, to take the first heat. Irene, in Maggie's Pup, was second, and Betty, in Me O My, was third.

Douglas Muncie, of Cutchogue, N. Y., won the Class A outboard event with a speed of 43.84 m. p. h., after Joseph Shutz, of Merchantville, N. J., winner of the first 5-mile heat, was disqualified. Muncie then returned for more trophies, winning the Class B event at 40.80 m. p. h., and the Class C at 44.75 m. p. h.

Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor distributed trophies tonight at a reception for the yachtsmen, including skippers of 70 boats from the Maryland Yacht Club.

Miles River Regatta Will Begin Today

St. Michaels, Md., Aug. 2.—Sailing and power boats from virtually every South Atlantic State began converging on this historic Chesapeake Bay port today to make ready for the annual Miles River Yacht Club Regatta, scheduled to get under way tomorrow morning.

The regatta will be a four-day affair, winding up Sunday with a long-distance race from the mouth of the Miles River to the Baltimore Light. The cross-bay haul will be sponsored by the Maryland Yacht Club.

This afternoon the traditional Chesapeake Bay log canoes will break out their fastest canoes to compete in the first of a three-race series. The series will mark the centennial of log canoe sailing at St. Michaels. Back in 1839, the first race for canoes was held in these waters when 30 starters competed for the Douglas Cup.

Man of the Month

By Walter Johnson.

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Dutch Leonard, the Nats' big knuckle-ball specialist, and Angelo Giuliani took the lead in August's Man of the Month contest yesterday when they jumped into a tie as a result of their performance in the 2-to-1 victory over the Browns. Points were distributed as follows:

To Leonard, five points, because he held the Browns hitless for five innings and confined them to four hits for the nine innings.

To Giuliani, two points, because he made his two-base hit count by scoring the winning run.

To George Case, two points, because he scored the Nats' first run after hitting a triple, and drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly.

To Jimmy Bloodworth, one point, because he enjoyed a perfect day at bat—two doubles and a single—although the hits were of no avail.

Daniels Will Get Marine Backing Monday in Stadium

The Marines are coming, but don't get alarmed—they're just followers of Maynard Daniels, promising young Marine heavyweight, and they will take up a position in Griffith Stadium Monday night to cheer him on when he meets Jake Friedman, of Baltimore, in a six-round preliminary on the Nathan Mann-Steve Dudas card.

Col. Heinie Miller, secretary of the District Boxing Commission, now on two weeks' active duty at Quantico, Va., announced several hundred Marines plan to attend the fight to see Daniels in action.

Daniels, a private in the Marine Reserve, has a string of six straight knockouts behind him on the West Coast, and his fighting ability is held in high esteem by Miller. He has been training at Washington and Quantico.

Galento-Nova Scrap Provides Bettors a Cinch

Orange, N. J., Aug. 2 (U.P.).—The Galento-Nova fight at Philadelphia on September 7 provides one of the most unusual betting situations in boxing history. In Philadelphia Galento is quoted the 8-to-5 favorite, but in New York Nova is favored at 7 to 5. By wagering the same sum on Nova in Philadelphia and on Galento in New York, a better would be sure to win regardless of which fighter lost.

Eight Thirty Beats Pompoon and Fighting Fox at Saratoga

Victor Clips Second Off Mark Established By Discovery in '35; Wins by Five Lengths

By the Associated Press

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 2.—George D. Widener's Eight Thirty, which got off to a bad start this year with two decisive setbacks at Jamaica, today defeated three older rivals in the one mile, weight-for-age Wilson Stakes and served notice that he may yet have a lot to say about the 1939 3-year-old championship. The chestnut son of Pilate, fresh from three victories in four starts at Delaware and back in the form that made him one of last season's top juveniles, just toyed with such well-known stars J. H. Louchheim's Pompoon, Louis B. Mayer's Main Man and William Woodward's Fighting Fox. Furthermore, the Widener colt ran the fastest mile in the ten runnings of the fixture, finishing in 1:37 flat.

Eight Thirty reached the wire with five lengths to spare, scoring in a common jog. Pompoon, second to Fighting Fox in the Rich Massachusetts Handicap, was second by a neck. Main Man, the star of his owner's stable, finished five lengths in advance of the unreliable Fighting Fox. The latter was fresh from triumphs in the Massachusetts and Fleetwing handicaps.

Fighting Fox and Eight Thirty were split choices at 2 to 1. Eight Thirty, in clipping a fifth of a second from the mark for the stake established by Discovery in the 1935 renewal, earned a purse of $3,250. It was his fourth success in seven outings as a 3-year-old.

PAPER GIRL, going in her best form under improved handling, assumed command early, stalled off TRAPSHOT, saved ground and had enough in reserve to withstand CANWYN. The latter, close up from the beginning, continued gamely to the end. TRAPSHOT had good speed to be prominent and held on better than usual. NAVIGATION could not improve his position at any time.

SECOND RACE—Seven furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:36. Winner, R. A. Lowe's b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DUCHESS DEL, $28.80, $10.00, $7.80; DRESSMAKER, $5.30, $4.80; MISS GREEN, $17.00.

DUCHESS DEL, hustled into a contending position, rallied to reach the leaders at the final bend, was blocked midway of the homestretch when MISS GREEN swerved out, responded gamely and was up in the last strides. DRESSMAKER fell back leaving the backstretch, was placed in punishment and came again at the close. MISS GREEN was rushed off her feet to gain the lead and swerved badly in the stretch drive while tiring. CAUTIOUS BO closed a good gap from a slow beginning.

THIRD RACE—About 2 miles. Purse, $500; claiming. The Darlington Steeplechase. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:08. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA BUD, $7.30, $3.70, $3.00; WAR PORT, $4.30, $3.30; SANSARICA, $3.10.

JUSTA BUD, nicely handled and fencing cleanly, was reserved for the first mile, went to the front without effort, moved clear and had much in reserve at the close. WAR PORT displaced OLAN without effort after going seven furlongs, fell back when collared, then outstayed tiring horses. SANSARICA was carried wide for the first mile, was rushed up fast at the eleventh fence, then flattened out badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:41. Winner, E. A. FERNBRAKE, never far from the leaders, rallied stoutly when placed to a drive, closed courageously on the outside of the leaders and was up in the last strides. WINTONA displaced LADY BLOCK after a half mile, saved ground and held on tenaciously in the final drive. VERITAS went improved with a change in riders and held on resolutely after entering contention. MISS DOLLY KAY, weakly ridden and messed about in the first five furlongs after breaking slowly, swung very wide into the stretch and finished stoutly in a dead heat.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $500; claiming. The Pylesville. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start bad from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:12. Off 4:17½. Winner, J. Two-dollar mutuels paid—IRA L., $34.60, $13.70, $5.50; LEAD PLEASE, $7.90, $5.00; TULEYRIES LIN, $3.40.

IRA L., away in the first flight, had good speed to follow close to the leaders, displaced CAT'S CRADLE readily and then held on stoutly in the closing drive. LEAD PLEASE went well placed and closed with good speed. TULEYRIES LIN was used up forcing the early pace and failed to stay in the closing drive. CHALOTAUR, away poorly, closed gamely.

SIXTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate in chute. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:49. Off 4:50. Winner, M. B. Goss' ro. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROOKE HEROD, $18.80, $8.20, $5.10; BEAUFAST, $4.50, $3.20; BYNUM'S RUN, $6.90.

BROOKE HEROD, showing startling improvement over his last race, went right to the front, shook off WANDER BIRD, saved ground and had enough left to withstand BEAUFAST. The latter, reserved off the pace, gained fast in the last half mile. BYNUM'S RUN, outrun for six furlongs, circled field and finished full of run. BAV moved up alongside on the outside at the final turn, but weakened under punishment in stretch drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate in chute. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:23. Off 5:25. Winner, J. White's b. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CORA KAY, $10.40, $5.90, $4.30; KENNER, $22.40, $12.80; WORTHOWNING, $5.10.

CORA KAY, showing improvement under alert handling, was prominent early, stole through on the inside midway of the backstretch, swung to the outside to wear down KENNER and came away under a drive. KENNER opened up a wide lead, saved a lot of ground, but could not stay when caught. WORTHOWNING could not improve his position in the final drive. MIRMISS closed a good gap.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:51. Off 5:54½. Winner, E. D. Taliaferro's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUSTLE HOME, $24.80, $8.10, $6.20; MACHILLA, $9.60, $6.40; COUNTER PASS, $8.50.

HUSTLE HOME, allowed to gain her best stride, worked her way into contention in the last half mile, went to the front in the last eighth and barely lasted long enough under a hard drive. MACHILLA was taken up at the start, was steered wide until reaching the final turn, then came through on the inside in the last quarter mile and just missed. He appeared best. COUNTER PASS dropped far out of contention, but closed a big gap.

DUCHESS DEL, hustled into a contending position, rallied to reach the leaders at the final bend, was blocked midway of the homestretch when MISS GREEN swerved out, responded gamely and was up in the last strides. DRESSMAKER fell back leaving the backstretch, was placed in punishment and came again at the close. MISS GREEN was rushed off her feet to gain the lead and swerved badly in the stretch drive while tiring. CAUTIOUS BO closed a good gap from a slow beginning.

JUSTA BUD, nicely handled and fencing cleanly, was reserved for the first mile, went to the front without effort, moved clear and had much in reserve at the close. WAR PORT displaced OLAN without effort after going seven furlongs, fell back when collared, then outstayed tiring horses. SANSARICA was carried wide for the first mile, was rushed up fast at the eleventh fence, then flattened out badly.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, fillies and mares. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:41. Winner, E. A. FERNBRAKE, never far from the leaders, rallied stoutly when placed to a drive, closed courageously on the outside of the leaders and was up in the last strides. WINTONA displaced LADY BLOCK after a half mile, saved ground and held on tenaciously in the final drive. VERITAS went improved with a change in riders and held on resolutely after entering contention. MISS DOLLY KAY, weakly ridden and messed about in the first five furlongs after breaking slowly, swung very wide into the stretch and finished stoutly in a dead heat.

Steel Activity Is Steady at 60 Per Cent

Higher Production Rate Prevented by Motors' Strike

Cleveland, Aug. 2.—Optimism continues to grow among steel producers. Ingot production this week holds at about 60 per cent and daily pig iron output in July gained 7.6 per cent over June. Only the retarding influence of the General Motors strike, which is delaying work on new models, has prevented a higher operating rate for steel this week, says Iron Age today in its weekly survey of the industry.

"Automobile companies other than General Motors are making rapid strides toward the bringing out of 1940 models. Three press previews of new cars are now scheduled for the first half of August. The Ford Motor Co. has ordered 50,000 tons of steel and will need twice that much for initial production of new cars. Meanwhile motor car assemblies are tapering off and the low point will be reached either this week or next, with a rising trend to come probably before the end of August.

"A sudden spurt in the placing of line pipe by oil companies is a welcome indication in an industry that has been laggard in its steel purchases this year. The Standard Oil Co. of Indiana has bought two lines totaling about 660 miles or about 38,000 tons of seamless pipe. The Shell Union Oil Co. has purcha d about 4,500 tons of seamless pipe for a line in the East. A natural gas line requiring about 27 000 tons of 16-inch pipe is pending.

"Export trade is one of the strong features of current steel demand. Abrogation of the trade treaty with Japan will have little, if any, effect on purchases by Japan of essential materials in the United States, according to well-informed opinion. Japan has recently diverted some purchases elsewhere, such as pig iron to India and Australia, but she has nowhere else to turn for iron and steel scrap in the quantities she requires and she is also dependent on the United States for some steel, although her capacity in recent years has been increased from 2,000,000 to 5,000,000 tons annually, thereby cutting down her imports.

"Steel scrap prices are up slightly at Pittsburgh, are strong at Chicago and up 50 cents at St. Louis and $1 at Buffalo. The Iron Age scrap composite price is 4 cents higher at $15.17."

Associated Gas Output

New York, August 2.—For the week ended July 28, Associated Gas & Electric System reports net electric output of 96,527,556 units. This is an increase of 10,578,686 units, or 12.3 per cent above production of 85,948,870 a year ago. Gross output, including sales to other utilities, amounted to 107,331,345 units for the current week.

417 Pennsylvania Banks Show Gain In New Loans

New York, Aug. 2.—Current assertions that banks are not adequately serving the credit needs of their communities are answered, so far as one State is concerned, by figures submitted to the American Bankers Association by 417 banks in Pennsylvania showing that these banks made 231,236 new loans aggregating $372,350,286 during the six months' period between January 1 and June 30, 1939. The average number of new loans per bank was 555 and the average size of the loans was $1,610. The 417 reporting banks represent 43 per cent of the 965 banks in the Keystone State holding membership in the American Bankers Association.

The same 417 banks report that in addition to new loans they made 675,498 renewals of existing loans, amounting to the continuation of credit extensions totaling $750,393,485. The average number of loans renewed per bank was 1,620, and the average renewal was for a loan of $1,111. Applying these figures from 43 per cent of the banks to the whole, it can be estimated that the A. B. A. member banks in Pennsylvania renewed approximately 1,000,000 loans during the first half of 1939, aggregating somewhere around $1,000,000,000.

These 417 banks also report the making of 6,378 new mortgage loans aggregating $25,365,244, that the average number of new mortgage loans per bank was 15, and that an average size of the mortgages was $3,977.

Utah Oil Accepts Pipe Line Bids

Salt Lake City, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Utah Oil Refining Co. announced today that bids for building its 438-mile pipeline, which will cross the continental divide in running from Wyoming into Utah, had been awarded to four companies.

The pipeline's cost has been estimated unofficially between $4,000,000 and $7,000,000. Johnson said the project will be divided into eight parcels with work expected to start next Monday and approximately 1,000 men employed.

New Canadian Issues Decrease in July

New York, Aug. 2.—Although offerings of new Canadian bond issues in July, amounting to $13,863,085, were somewhat lower than in the previous month, the total for the first seven months of this year showed a gain over the total for the corresponding period of 1938, standing at $489,662,712 compared with $369,062,628, according to the Dominion Securities Corporation.

These figures do not include short term Dominion treasury bills.

Cal. Standard Votes 25 Cent Dividend

San Francisco, Aug. 2 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of California today declared the regular quarterly dividend of 25 cents a share on common stock, payable September 15 to holders of record August 15.

In two preceding quarters this year, extra dividends of 5 cents each were disbursed with the regular payment.

Electric Production 11.8% Over Year Ago

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—The Nation's generators hit another high mark for the year in production of electric power during the week ended July 28, the Edison Electric Institute reported today.

Latest output of 2,341,822,000 kilowatt hours was 2.1 per cent ahead of 2,294,588,000 in the preceding week and 11.8 per cent more than 2,093,907,000 in the comparable 1938 week.

Wheat Price Advance Cut In Late Trading

Maximum Rise Is 1⅝, Closing Quotations Are ½-1 Cent Up

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—Wheat futures climbed today, resuming the upward trend which began more than a week ago. The market was 1⅝ cents higher at the maximum but offerings cut the gains at the close.

Strength at Liverpool, a bullish report of further deterioration to the Canadian crop, and a pickup in export demand inspired buyers from the opening and the tone was firmer throughout the session. There also were reports that another heat wave could be expected both in the American grain belt and in Canada, where there have been persistent deterioration reports since the original favorable forecast.

Wheat closed ½-1 cent higher; September, 65⅜@65½; December, 66@66⅛; corn, unchanged to ⅜ up; September, 42@42⅝; December, 42½@42⅝; oats, unchanged to ⅛ higher; soy beans, ⅛-½ up; rye, ¼-⅜ up, and lard, 3 to 5 cents higher.

The unfavorable weekly crop summary by the Canadian government lent a bullish aspect to the Liverpool market, which closed ½-⅝ higher. Winnipeg also closed higher.

Business Index Up to 95.8% in Week

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Time magazine's index of business conditions advanced this week to 95.8 from 95.3 the previous week.

A continued high working capital ratio for the country as a whole, stoppage of deflationary money influences from abroad and strongly rising spending in trade centers were cited as the basic factors in the rise. A high level of spending in financial centers also contributed to the increase. The index, which is based on money and banking figures, is designed to reflect changes in underlying conditions likely to affect the volume of business.

Member Borrowing Advances in June

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Collateral borrowings by the New York Stock Exchange members—"street loans," to the trade—totaled $553,767,240 at the close of business July 31, a gain of $16,505,281 over the June 30 total, the exchange announced today.

Lowest figure loans have reached since 1939 was $241,599,943 on August 1, 1932, which compared with a record high of $8,549,383,979 on October 1, 1929.

New Deal Setbacks Spur Brisk Advance In Securities; Composite Average Moves Up 0.35 in Heavier Buying

New York, Aug. 2.—The complete reversal faced by the Administration in the closing days of Congress was reflected again in the stock market by rising prices and greater activity in trading. Defeat of the spending-lending bill, the abandonment today of the housing bill, the cuts made in the Administration's appropriations measure and the action of the President himself in signing the Hatch bill today, after having twice raised some question as to its constitutionality, have provided a sound basis for hope that the road back to sanity in economic thinking can be retraced.

The gain in today's stock market was not sensational, amounting to 0.35 point in the composite average, but the fact that the trend was up at all should dispose of any doubts as to the welcome the above political developments received from investors. When the Senate refused to grant the President the revisions he sought in the Neutrality act, and the Chief Executive expressed the view that it had put an end to a nice little business boom, the reply of the stock market was a brisk forward movement on a large volume of business.

New Deal Defeat Is Good Sign

Much the same reaction greeted the defeat of the spending bill and today's political upsets. The movement was not as marked but it was unmistakable. Those who trade in securities and who have the welfare of business at heart were saying in so many words that they look upon the defeat of the New Deal as bullish and that, far from there being any homicide in the business world, the above developments signal the beginning of a march toward better times.

Their conviction is based on the record of the New Deal, with the direct and contingent debt of the Federal Government raised to $50,000,000,000, and higher taxes forced on corporations and individuals in order to carry this burden, the fact remains that the unemployment problem has not been changed in any important respect. Moreover, when businesss booms, which would relieve this situation, have got under way, they have been halted rather than helped by the attitude of business opposition in Washington, stringent regulation, adoption of schemes which went contrary to trusted economic law, and the threat of additional taxes. There has been no strike of capital in the strict sense of the word; there has been a fear on the part of capital to go into new ventures. Nothing could be as helpful in removing this fear as the political developments such as we have seen in the last two days.

Business News Cheerful

Current business news bears out the assumption that the trend is upward. The index of the New York Herald Tribune, published tomorrow, is at a new high since the week of March 18. The midweek report today showed a resumption of the upward trend in this field. A new high for 1939 was established in the week ended July 29, the gain over the previous week being 2 per cent and over a year ago, 11.8 per cent. A monthly statistical survey by Standard Statistics say that business had been taking advantage of the lull abroad and the rays of light which have pierced the murky confusion in Washington, and further advances are in prospect. It finds the usual economic indicators generally favorable.

One section of the stock market which has been the most sensitive to the beneficial changes in business and politics has been the public utilities. Throughout the early years of the New Deal it was this group of companies that was selected for particular opposition from the Federal Government. The belief that the doctrines of this era have now been overturned has encouraged the holders of the power and light shares.

Public Utilities Most Active

In today's list of the 15 most active stocks, nine were public utilities. The day's fourmost active stocks were all utilities, namely Columbia Gas & Electric, Commonwealth & Southern, Consolidated Edison and National Power & Light. Edison gained 1⅛, Engineers Public Service 1, Water Works 1, and Electric Power & Light about a point.

Reawakened interest in the utilities has done much for the curb exchange where a good proportion of the listings is in this category. The curb's volume today was 207,000, of which 43,100 shares were in Electric Bond & Share. This compared with the 40,800 shares in Columbia Gas & Electric, the big boards most active issue.

Bond Trading Light

Local traction bonds were active and sharply higher today in the listed bond market, but other issues remained quiet and irregular. The proposals for exchanges of existing B. M. T. issues for New York City bonds aided the tractions. B. M. T. 4½s were up 3 points and other issues of the same system were advanced more moderately. Interborough and Manhattan Railway bonds gained 1 to 3 points. The activity in such securities failed to lift total trading materially, as turnover was $5,900,000.

Speculative rails were subdued, apparently on reports that rail aid legislation is unlikely at the session now drawing to a close. Some of the borderline rails were better, however, despite this occurrence. Holding-company bonds and the convertible issues tended to improve, largely because of the good tone of the equities market. Communications bonds were sharply higher, and a few other special groups also did well.

Foreign Issues Generally Down

Foreign dollar obligations were neglected, and only a few changes were significant. Japanese bonds softened, with the 5½s moving into low ground. German, Italian and Polish issues hardly moved, as a crisis is not expected immediately. Best rated foreigns were dull. Panama 5s moved another point downward, but Paulista Railway 7s gained sharply, other Latin-American default bonds being neglected.

United States Treasury securities were idle and firm, as the market was pleased by the defeat of the lending-spending bill. Best rated utility bonds attracted some buying, as did the highest grade carrier bonds. United States Steel debentures held at their new high.

'Real Incomes' Advance 15%, Survey Shows

Earnings Increase, Food, Clothing and Rent Costs Dip

Minneapolis, Aug. 2.—A modest, but steady, recovery in American business, along with continued low prices for daily living necessities, enables Mr. and Mrs. John Public to buy more goods and services than they could a year ago because their pocketbook contains $1.13 cents against $1 a year ago, while their living costs now are 98 cents compared with $1 a year ago. The public's "real income," therefore, is $1.15 compared with $1 in June, 1938, according to a monthly study of what people get and spend, made known here today by Investors Syndicate.

"Wage earners at the start of July, 1939," explained the study, "were receiving $1.29 for every $1 at the same 1938 period. Checks of salaried workers at the start of July, 1939, were $1.10 as compared with $1 for the same 1938 season.

"Farmers and businessmen likewise received larger incomes at the start of July than at the same time a year earlier. Their cash incomes, classified as 'other income' in this study, were $1.03 at the beginning of July, 1939, against $1 on the same date in 1938.

"Resumption of the downswing in food prices, most important item in the average family budget, was a potent factor in holding down general living costs. Mr. and Mrs. Public could buy as much food of the same quality at the start of July, 1939, for 95 cents as they purchased for $1 a year ago. Only a month earlier this year food costs were 97 cents on the dollar compared with the start of June, 1938. Clothing, another major item in general living expenditures, cost only 97 cents throughout June, 1939, as compared with $1 in the like 1938 month. Rents, whether for city apartments, seaside cottages or mountain chalets, cost 99 cents at the beginning of July, 1939, contrasted with $1 12 months earlier.

Adverse News Affecting Crop Loans Sends Cotton Prices Down

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Washington news hit the cotton futures market a glancing blow in last-hour trading today. After coasting along at slightly lower levels most of the session, the late selling flurry put final prices down 8 to 12 points.

Tip-off to sellers came when the House Appropriations Committee refused to include in the last deficieney appropriation bill nearly $120,000,000 to restore the impaired capital of the Commodity Credit Corporation. Fears were expressed in the cotton trade that sufficient funds might not be available to put teeth into a loan program on the 1939-40 cotton crop.

The market opened down a little in wake of lower than due Liverpool cables and persistent selling in October through a leading spot house.

C. of C. Discusses Abandonment of Butternut St. Line

Establishment of a permanent street car service in Takoma Park, Md., and D. C., was urged last night at a meeting of the Takoma Park Chamber of Commerce following a discussion of the proposed abandonment of the Butternut street line.

Although the chamber did not take any action as a body on the matter, all the members protested individually any substitution of buses for street cars.

The proposal of a rail service that will pass under the Aspen street viaduct, around Eastern avenue to Carroll avenue, down Cedar street to Fourth and Butternut street was made by J. Milton Derrick, lifelong resident and prominent merchant. The establishment of such a loop, Milton contended "is the permanent nature of transportation the people desire." It was suggested that a terminal similar to the one at Fourteenth and Colorado avenues for buses and cars, be built, in Takoma Park.

The group voted to attend the hearing of the Public Utilities Commission on the Capitol Transit Co.'s proposed plan for the new bus line. O. W. Youngblood, president, announced the chamber will then make a recommendation.

Dean J. Locke, staff engineer of the Capitol Transit Co., addressing the body said the company was losing patronage on the Butternut street line and therefore proposed its abandonment. He said that the establishment of a loop on that line would cost $65,000 on the Maryland side and $20,000 if built on District property. This could not be accomplished this year, he added.

Zulus and Zouaves, Hobble Skirts Hit Paris Style Lists

Full evening skirts were slit up the front to show Zouave trousers of striped silks ballooned out over tight ankle bands. Afternoon skirts were cut out square in front to disclose satin knickerbockers with legs in different colors.

Boleros were Zouaved-styled and military-braided. Evening suits had braided boleros and tube-like dresses with slit hems. Other models showed bustle treatments or full circular skirts of stiff brocade.

Guess What It Is, You Can Have It

Bloomsburg, Pa., Aug. 2 (AP).—A tailless, web-footed "whatsit" which Farmer Rush Fritz caught raiding his chicken coops had the whole town guessing tonight—at a nickel a guess.

A fireman's carnival took the critter off his hands, put it on display in a cage, with an offer to "Guess what it is, and it's yours."

Two feet long and spotted like a faun, the animal is 10 inches high, has a "head like a rat," nibbles like a beaver, has brown fur and an underslung lower jaw.

NYA Grants $156,955 to D. C. Students

$284,939 Allotted For Maryland and $579,027 for Virginia

A grant of $156,955 for school, college and graduate student aid in the District during the coming school year has been approved by the National Youth Administration, Aubrey Williams, head of the administration, announced yesterday.

The allotment to the District was part of a $27,465,319 total assigned for the national student aid program to provide part-time jobs for more than 450,000 students. Of the District grant, $34,105 will go to secondary school students, and $122,850 to college and graduate students.

Included in the State allotments were $284,939 for Maryland, and $579,027 for Virginia. Officials explained the quotas for each State are determined on the basis of 10 per cent of the total college enrollment of students between 16 and 24 years, on October 1, 1938.

Williams said that the State NYA administrators had been notified that their allotments would be provided in nine monthly installments, with the first payments available to eligible institutions at the start of the school year.

The program offers students who need aid in secondary schools from $3 to $6 a month; $10 to $20 a month for undergraduate college and university students, and $20 to $30 a month for graduate students.

Rep. Church Asks Investigation of Home Loan Units

Representative Church (Republican), of Illinois, told the House last night he had introduced a resolution calling for an audit of all accounts and an investigation of the Federal Home Loan Bank and its subsidiaries, including the Home Owners Loan Corporation. He said there had been indications of "dereliction of duties, irregularities and misconduct."

Representative Byrns (Democrat), of Tennessee, informed the House that Church spoke not only for the Republican membership but also for "some of us in the Democratic Party" and agreed there should be an investigation.

Predicting there would be a $100,000,000 loss on the HOLC's operations in the New York region, Church said the New York State manager for the HOLC from 1933 to 1936 was Vincent Dailey, vice chairman of the Democratic State organization, and that Dan Le Hand, brother of Miss Marguerite Le Hand, personal secretary to President Roosevelt, was the Massachusetts State manager. He declared both "allowed property to be appraised on a basis of the vote value rather than on a basis of real estate values."

Pat Mahan (right), 39, World War ace and movie stunt flyer, volunteered to fly to New York Tuesday night to give blood to Abraham Silverman, stricken with a streptococci infection at Coney Island Hospital. Mahan heard a radio appeal from Silverman's wife, broadcast over a Nation-wide hookup while sitting in his Washington home. Mahan was one of six men in the country who had recovered from the infection and whose blood would do for the transfusion. He called the hospital, boarded an airliner that made a special stop here to pick him up, and gave a pint and a quarter of his blood after arriving at the hospital

Dog Routs Bear Clawing Mother, Baby and Boy, 3

Clintwood, Va., Aug. 2 (AP).—"Boss," a shepherd dog, proved his right to the name today by routing a bear that attacked and severely clawed and bit a mountain mother who fought the animal to protect a baby in her arms and a boy, 3, at her heels.

She thrust the boy into a rain barrel, seized a stick and fought the bear. Then the dog put the bear to flight.

Keystone Club Sounds a Blast Against Incessant Auto Horns

Recommends Honking Be Used Only in Emergency, and Advises Drivers to Try Brakes, Not Noise, at Crowded Corners

Multiply the tone of the most silvery auto horn in Washington by the speed of sound, about 1,100 feet a second, and the product is nothing but corny.

This was the general argument of Keystone Automobile Club officials who, yesterday, threw the weight of their organization behind the daily unrecorded protests of Washington residents against too much horn-blowing in the District.

"Nuisance" was among the cooler words officials used to describe the District's incessant chorus of auto horns. They specifically included those moments when children take over the driver's seat and turn loose the horn. Such youngsters are not "cute", officials said flatly.

Numerous complaints about this phase of horn-blowing have been received by the club, said Edward P. Curran, safety director.

What goes for the children goes for the youth who thinks his horn is a suitable calling card when he drives up to the home of his girl, officials said.

The club recommended that horns should be used only as a warning device in sudden emergency, and directed this advice especially to those drivers who place more reliance on horns than brakes, and daily bet their lives that they can can clear the most crowded intersection with but a few horn blasts.

R. C. Johnson, Once of House, To Be Buried

Was Wounded in War; Funeral Tomorrow In Arlington Cemetery

Services for former Representative Royal Cleaves Johnson, of South Dakota, who died yesterday of a heart attack at his home, 1868 Columbia road northwest, will be tomorrow at Arlington Cemetery. Mr. Johnson, who practised law here since resigning from the House in 1933, was 57.

He suffered a heart attack late Tuesday and had been under care of a physician since. His wife, Mrs. Florence Thode Johnson, was with him when he died. He had been confined to his home since suffering a fractured leg in an automobile acident several months ago.

Elected to Congress in 1915, Mr. Johnson resigned in 1917 to enlist as a private in the Army. Wounded seriously at Montfaucon, he left the service a first lieutenant and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre and the Order of the Purple Heart.

Re-elected to Congress before he doffed his uniform, Mr. Johnson became a member of the House Rules Committee, but resigned to take the chairmanship of the Veterans' Committee. He was responsible for steering through the House much of the veterans' legislation enacted in the next dozen years.

He was born in Cherokee, Iowa, October 3, 1882, the son of Eli and Philena Everett Johnson. After graduation with an LL. B., at the University of South Dakota in 1906, he practiced law and was attorney general of the State just before his first election to Congress.

Besides his wife, he is survived by two sons, Everett R. Johnson, of Falls Church, Va., and Lieut. Harlan T. Johnson, U. S. N., attached to U. S. S. Trenton.

General Motors Strike Settlement Reported Near

Detroit, Aug. 2 (AP).—Reports persisted tonight that settlement of the General Motors tool and die makers strike was imminent.

Nevertheless, hundreds of extra policemen were assigned to duty at various Detroit plants to prevent a recurrence of the violence which has marked the strike. Spokesmen for the corporation and the C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union were in conference with Federal Labor Conciliator James F. Dewey.

Twelve plants and approximately 7,500 workers are affected by the strike.

At Cleveland, a committee of nonstrikers urged the Dies committee to investigate a C. I. O. United Auto Workers' walkout at General Motors big East Side plant.

The telegram declared the C. I. O. unionists and sympathizers "have communistic tendencies alien to American ideals of organizing with many opposed."

Naval Reservist Sprains Ankle, Loses Duty Pay

One month ago today a Naval Reserve officer sprained his ankle, starting up a string of events which were climaxed yesterday when the General Accounting Office delivered an adverse financial ruling.

Donald Owen Van Ness, a Chicago salesman who is an ensign in the Naval Reserve, received orders last June to proceed to New York and report to the U. S. S. Quincy on July 8 for 14 days training duty.

On July 1 he left Chicago for New York by auto and two days later, while en route, sprained his ankle. To make matters worse, he arrived at the dock a few minutes too late to catch the Quincy, though he wouldn't have gone along anyway because he was on crutches.

The question presented to the Controller General was whether Van Ness was entitled to active duty pay and mileage. R. N. Elliot, assistant Controller General, ruled that as the officer did not have to leave as early as July 1 to catch a ship leaving July 8 and the injury was not in the line of duty, he is entitled to neither travel expenses nor active duty pay.

Oldest Inhabitants Urge Fair in 1943; Ask About Compass

The hot weather kept most members of the Association of Oldest Inhabitants home last night. But, without the advantage of a quorum the organization approved in principle the suggestion for a big-scale fair here in 1943 and deplored a compass in a branch Postoffice floor that indicates north in a faulty direction.

The association ordered an investigation of the faulty compass after hearing a written complaint from Thomas B. Walker, of 6000 "New Hampshire avenue northeast."

He wrote: "Down in Mr. Farley's first floor headquarters, a compass is to be walked upon and the south points north and wrong. To me the building inspector and mechanic for the Government were off on facts."

Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman, Consumers Council of Washington, was unable to speak as scheduled because of illness.

Scientific Robbers Melt Saw-Proof Prison Bars, Flee

London, Ohio, Aug. 2 (AP).—A police killer and three robbers invented an ingenious blow torch to cut through saw-proof steel bars, and escaped today from the State prison farm here.

They lined a flower pot with asbestos and burned coke and alcohol in it by forced oxygen obtained from the prison hospital. The contrivance melted the steel.

Answers to Quiz

1. Double. This is a very good example of a tentative or co-operative double of an opposing minor suit overcall at the level of two-odd. If the opponents should fulfill the contract they still would not get a game, and partner is expected to co-operate and take out if his hand is unsuitable. With your particular holding it looks as though the opponents should definitely be set. You have somewhere between three and four defensive tricks in the side suits. You have three trumps to the jack, and your partner has an absolute minimum of two diamonds in his hand and a smattering of honor strength.

2. One no-trump. With a part-score, particularly of 60, we open the bidding with one no-trump rather than one in a suit on all balanced hands containing anywhere from three-plus to five high-card tricks. Even with one or two biddable suits, we prefer the no-trump opening, provided we have something in every suit. The reasons for this are: Firstly, that the no-trump bid makes it more difficult for the opponents to defend, and if they do our partner knows that he can double any suit which he had defense against; secondly, partner also knows that he is safe in bidding any fairly decent five-card suit of his own.

3. Two spades. As a matter of general procedure, it is safe to say that we should treat partner's vulnerable overcalls with almost the same degree of respect that we treat his opening bids. This hand, in playing strength, is clearly good enough to raise partner's spade bid to two.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

ADD DETAILS of the esconcing in office of John M. Carmody, administrator of the Federal Works Agency: the stenographers have been given a form for letters prepared for Carmody's signature. The first four points are uninteresting enough, saying simply that office of the Administrator stationery should be used; that one extra copy should be made and marked for Mr. Carmody's files; that the address should be blocked, etc.

But the sample letter, in the light of the Hatch bill, is humorously ironical. The sample:

"Mr. John Doe
Salt Lake City
Utah

My dear Mr. Doe:

Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of their party.

Sincerely,
John M. Carmody."

A SMALL-SIZED stew is bubbling in the sedate and traditionally untroubled Government Printing Office, wherein the United Federal Workers of America contend that the personnel office declines to meet with its representatives to settle a controversy over efficiency ratings. This much is learned: the GPO has objected to the U. F. W. A.'s broadsiding the original issue to the public winds, thinking that the matter should have been settled, originally, within the GPO and not before the public. It is contended that the GPO has machinery for settling such controversies, machinery that would have functioned without the broadsides.

On the other hand, the U. F. W. A., in a resolution of yesterday, says that the GPO's action controvenes the Administration's policy "of the right of employes either in the Government or otherwise to organize and be represented by persons of their own choosing." The union contends that it should be heard.

UNIQUE in conception and striking in execution are the two Indian murals recently installed on the walls in the Interior Department's fourth-floor halls.

Painted by California Artist Maynard Dixon, who has spent much of his life living with and studying Indians, the murals show the Redman, not as a dying remnant of a once-proud race, peering with shaded eye into the sunset of his epoch, but rather as a "going concern," learning to live in a new way in a new world.

One panel shows two braves meeting the vanguard of the military and trapper immigration of the last century. The other portrays an Indian family getting agricultural instruction from a Government agent.

Singularly, they are painted on canvas, rather than on the plaster, and are cemented to the walls by a new process.

NOTES: Congratulations to Cornelius Stribling, a popular figure in Foreign and Domestic Commerce since 1912, who goes now to the Civil Aeronautics Authority as chief of the photographic laboratory. Since 1919, Stribling has been in charge of the photographic and exhibits division of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and takes his new post well prepared.

Fletcher H. Rawls, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, yesterday gave Stribling a watch on behalf of fellow employes . . . Retirements from the Commerce Department are Merritt O. Chance (Census), 39 years' service, and Mary Elizabeth Whitley (Coast and Geodetic Survey), who served 29 years . . . Employes in the Division of Foreign Trade Statistics, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, were notified yesterday of the death in Seattle of Mrs. Virgie P. Sparks, 62, who for 16 years had been employed as a statistical clerk in the division. Officials there said that Mrs. Sparks several weeks ago left here with a party of friends for a tour of the West. The Associated Press reported that she died of a heart attack while waiting to board the Victoria steamer at Seattle.

In the Federal Diary for one edition for Wednesday there appeared an item saying that G. A. O. Lodge, A. F. G. E., had adopted resolutions endorsing Cecil E. Custer for the position of national president of the organization. The resolution came from A. G. O. lodge, and not from the General Accounting Office.

OLIVER wheeled.

"Jody, you fool young un. The idees a boy'll git. I left a lamp burnin' by an open window. The curtain must of blowed and ketched. Hit worried me all through the evenin' at the doin's. Jody, you must want a ruckus mighty bad."

Jody gaped at her. His mother's mouth was open.

Ma Baxter said, "Why, you know——"

Judy saw his father grip her arm.

Oliver let out his breath slowly. He said, "I'm shore proud 'twasn't their doin'. I'd not of left one alive." He turned and drew Twink close to him. "Folks, meet my wife."

"Now I'm glad you got it settled," she said. "Mebbe Oliver'll take time to visit with me now and again."

Oliver took Twink by the hand and went to circle the house. Grandma turned fiercely on the Baxters.

"If you dast to let it out—— You think I aim to have two counties strowed with Forrester blood and my boy's bones, for a burnt-up house?"

Penny laid his hands on her shoulders.

"Ol' lady," he said. "Ol' lady—did I have the sense you got——"

Oliver said, "Don't take it too hard, Ma. We'll build you the best house on the river."

"I don't want it. I'm too old. I want to live in Boston."

Jody looked at his father. Penny's face was drawn.

Oliver said, "Why, Ma—leave here?"

His face lightened.

He said slowly, "I always ship out of Boston. Ma, I'd love it. But do I turn you loose amongst them Yankees, I'm feered you'll start another war between the States."

THE BAXTERS stood at the river landing in the cold dawn, saying good-by to Grandma and Oliver and Twink and Fluff. Around the bend to the south, the north-bound steamboat whistled for the landing. Grandma and Ma Baxter embraced. Grandma caught Jody to her and held him tight.

Penny said, "Jody and me'll miss you fearful."

Oliver put out his hand to Jody.

"I thank you for stickin' by me," he said. "I'll not forget you. Not even in the China Sea."

Grandma's chin was a flint arrowhead. Her mouth was tight.

Penny said, "If you folks ever change your minds and want to come back, there's a welcome at the Island day or night."

Twink said, "We 'bout to fergit what we got for Jody."

She said, "This is for you, Jody, 'cause you he'ped fight for Oliver."

He was numb with the happenings of the day. He took it and stared stupidly. She leaned forward and kissed him on the forehead. Her touch was strangely agreeable. Her lips were soft and her yellow hair was fragrant.

The gang-plank was thrown down. A bundle of freight was tossed to the dock. Grandma stooped and gathered Fluff in her arms. Penny took her soft, wrinkled face between his hands and laid his cheek against hers.

He said, "I got a real love for you. I—" His voice broke.

The Huttos filed up the gang-plank. The paddle-wheels thrashed the water, the current sucked at the boat. It swung out into mid-stream. Grandma and Oliver stood at the rail and waved at them. The boat whistle blew again and the steamer moved down the river. Jody stirred in his numbness and waved violently.

"Good-by, Grandma! Good-by, Oliver! Good-by, Twink!"

"Good-by, Jody——"

THEIR VOICES trailed away. It seemed to Jody that they were moving away from him into another world. It was as though he saw them die. There were rosy streaks across the east but the daylight seemed even colder than the night had been. The ashes of the Hutto house glowed faintly.

The Baxters drove home toward the scrub. Penny was wracked with sorrow for his friends. His face was strained. Jody was swept with so contradictory a tumult of thoughts that he gave up trying to sort them and snuggled down on the wagon-seat between the warmth of his mother and father. He opened the package Twink had given him. It was a small pewter cannister for his gunpowder. He hugged it to him. He remembered that Easy Ozell was on the east coast, and wondered if he would follow Grandma Hutto to Boston when he found her gone. The wagon jogged on to the clearing. The day would be cold but brilliant.

Penny said, "Nobody couldn't prove a thing. Them horse tracks? Why, the Forresters only say they seed the fire and come to watch it. They could say the county was full o' horses and 'twasn't even them had been there."

"Then I'd of let Oliver know the truth."

"Yes, and what'd he of done then? Lit in and killed two-three of 'em. Oliver's hot-headed and why wouldn't he be? Most ary man'd take out after fellers did sich as that to him. All right. Kill him a few Forresters and mebbe hang for it. Or else have the rest of 'em pitch in and kill the bunch of 'em, him and his Ma and his purty leetle wife."

Jody felt a new loyalty surge up in him.

"She do be mighty purty, Ma," he said.

"Men is all alike," she said conclusively.

Baxters Island was at hand. A sense of safety, of well-being, came over Jody. Other people had catastrophe, but the clearing was beyond it. The cabin waited for him, and the smokehouse full of good meat, with old Slewfoot's carcass added to it, and Flag. Above all Flag. He could scarcely contain himself until he reached the shed. He had a tale to tell him.

The January weather was mild. Now and then the sun would set in a cold red stillness, quilts would be inadequate through the night, and morning would show a thin film of ice on the water buckets. Then in a day or two it would be so warm that Ma Baxter could sit on the porch in the sun in the afternoon and work at her mending and patching, and Jody could run through the woods without his wool jacket.

The Baxter life had quieted along with the weather. The river folk were no doubt in a swivet, Penny said, over the burning of the Hutto house and the migration of the sharp-tongued mother, never understood; the sailor son, almost like a foreigner, and their own golden-headed Twink. Belief must be general that the drunken Forresters had set fire to the place on receipt of the word that Oliver had returned with the girl. But the river was a long way off, and news filtered slowly to Baxters Island. Penny and Ma and Jody sat by the hearth-fire evening after evening, reliving the night through which they had stood with the Huttos and watched the house char into embers; had waited with them, warmed by its heat, for the morning boat that nothing could dissuade Grandma from taking.

"To my notion," Penny said, "if that stranger that come in to the doin's had knowed it was Oliver's wife, and not jest said it were a gal with him, not even Lem'd of bothered 'em. They'd of figgered 'twas time to call quits, oncet she was married."

Penny sighed and was forced to agree. The Forresters must be doing their trading at Fort Gates. They never passed. They had picked up their share of the bear meat on their return. Their avoidance of Penny made their guilt incontrovertible. It saddened him. His hard-won peace lay shattered about him. A stone thrown at some distance, and meant for someone else, had struck him. He was bruised and troubled.

Jody was concerned, but it was the anxiety he felt for characters in a tale. Grandma and Oliver and Fluff and Twink had steamed away down the river as people in a book might steam. Oliver became one with the stories he had told of distant places. Now, in the stories, there were Grandma and Twink and Fluff. Oliver had said, "I'll not forget you, not even in the China Sea." And it was in the China Sea, for the most part, that he pictured him, infinitely remote and abused by people as fictitious as he.
